Recess Date Is Delayed By Subsidy Deadlock

Farm Groups Urge Flat Rejection of Rollback Despite New Veto Threat

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

A final "yes" or "no" choice on price rollback subsidies last night deadlocked congressional conferees and forced a subsidy-weary Congress into session at least another day.

Conferees recessed fruitless, day-long meetings without a decision on whether to cut off the rollback in defiance of another veto, or to yield to Administration wishes and leave subsidies ceiling-free.

Members of the conference group said last night that discussions probably had passed the point of compromise. They expected the conference to choose today between the Senate bill, barring Federal payments to push back prices, and the House measure, continuing the Commodity Credit Corporation for six months and sidestepping the subsidy issue.

The Administration clearly favored the latter course. Administration Senators who were absent in Tuesday's Senate rollback upset were reported returning to Washington to help save the White House from a last thumping defeat.

Urge Flat Rejection

Allied farm organizations, meanwhile, were turning on all the heat at their command to persuade Congress to reject price reduction subsidies flatly, even if it means another veto.

A telegram from five of the farm groups was addressed to each of the conferees, expressing the unanimous hope that the Senate's drastic Danaher-Tydings amendment will be accepted.

The telegram expressed "unalterable" opposition to any compromise on the rollback-subsidy issue. It was signed by the American Farm Bureau Federation, the National Grange, the National Cooperative Milk Producers Federation, the National Council of Farm Cooperatives and the National Wool Growers Association.

Take Issue to Country

Spokesmen for the farm groups argued that it would be the President's responsibility if the Commodity Credit Corporation was killed by a veto of the subsidy ban after Congress recessed. They asked members to strike down subsidies for the second time and take the issue to the country as an open invitation to "national debt inflation."

Administration members said they had no doubt the President was prepared to take responsibility for overriding the subsidy ouster, and likewise was ready to take the

Job Confirmation at Issue

Final Action Expected Today On 4 Billions in Supply Bills

By Edward Ryan
Post Staff Writer

Senate and House leaders last night agreed to solutions for the last handful of disputes in four billion dollars worth of Federal supply bills, and predicted that final action on them might be won in both houses today.

Of the three remaining bills, passage of two hinged on acceptance of a compromise for the McKellar job confirmation rider. The compromise, proposed by Representative Taber (Republican) of New York, would call for senatorial review of all persons appointed in the future to jobs paying $5500 a year or more in nearly a score of key war agencies. It would not affect employes now holding the high-paying jobs in the agencies, in contrast to the McKellar plan.

Senator McKellar (Democrat) of Tennessee, acting chairman of the Senate Appropriations Committee, last night predicted that the Senate would accept the Taber plan. The House has previously consistently turned thumbs down on McKellar's proposal.

Taber said he expected the House to accept his plan today, although it missed by a narrow margin a formal floor test yesterday.

Representative Cannon (Democrat) of Missouri, chairman of the House Appropriations Committee, however, said he believed the House would again vote to keep out any job confirmation clause, including Taber's.

He said that if the House followed through in its opposition to the job proviso, assurance had been given that the Senate would be asked to follow suit, and approve the bill minus either the McKellar or Taber proposals.

A proviso in the Taber compromise would permit anyone appointed to one of the high-paying jobs after June 30 to stay in office until November 1, unless the Senate turned down his formal appointment before that date. Those unconfirmed by November 1 would go out of office.

Following is the text of Taber's job proposal:

"No part of any appropriation contained in this act shall be available to pay the salary of any person at the rate of $5500 per annum or more appointed after June 30,

The War Labor Board hinted yesterday that it believes shipyard wages to be high enough—possibly outlawing any further increase to the more than a million shipbuilders whose wages are now before WLB for review.

The broad hint—dropper by Public Member Wayne L. Morse at an open hearing on demands for higher pay in the Nation's shipyards—pointed to a developing new WLB wage policy, one of holding a tight reign on the demands of higher-paid workers while listening sympathetically to the demands of lower-bracket workers.

Fred M. Vinson, economic stabilization director, pointed to a similar policy recently when he turned down an award of 8 cents an hour general increase to one million railroad workers, but left the door open for some increases to poorer paid groups.

"Just Cannot Continue"

"We just cannot sit here, in my judgment," Morse said, "and continue to raise wages in high paid brackets by granting further general wage increases.

"I think our decisions are pretty clear that we must do everything that is necessary to see to it that wages that permit of a standard of living of health and decency are guaranteed to American employes during the war in the interests of the war.

"But because some other agencies may not as yet have carried out what we think is their full obligation under the economic stabilization program (believed to be a reference to the Office of Price Administration's failure to hold down the cost of living), that is no justification for this board—and I speak only personally—to adopt a program of increasing wages in the high paid brackets in the absence of a showing that the workers concerned cannot maintain a standard of living of health and decency for the dura-

Senate Votes To Lift Corn Price Ceiling

Backs $1.40 Bushel Figure to Induce Release of Grain

By Christine Sadler
Post Staff Writer

In a new move against President Roosevelt's "hold the line" order, the Senate yesterday voted legislation that would raise the ceiling price on corn from $1.07 to $1.40 a bushel.

Led by Senator Smith (Democrat) of South Carolina, chairman of the Senate Agriculture Committee, farm bloc Senators contended the higher price would break the deadlock preventing release by farmers of corn badly needed to keep corn industrial plants going and to feed dairy herds and poultry flocks held outside the corn belt.

They argued corn growers can realize $1.37 a bushel on their crop by feeding it to their own hogs and just about as much by feeding it to their own poultry.

The voice vote, only slightly sprinkled by "noes," came while a meeting called on the corn shortage situation by Midwest Congressmen was being told by Administrator N. E. Dodd of the Agricultural Adjustment Agency that even the price of $2 a bushel would not make more corn available for feed.

Dodd's views were opposed vigorously by several of the corn-belt Representatives, who said a boost of 25 cents a bushel would turn loose thousands of bushels of stored corn.

Representative Jensen (Republican) of Iowa said, "You will get more corn on the market if you let the price go up. I say let's allow this thing to take a natural course in a normal American way and take

Coeds Are Warned About Romancing During Wartime

Ann Arbor, Mich., July 7 (AP). "Indiscriminate war romances," a psychologist warns University of Michigan coeds, can sabotage the war effort.

Dr. Lee Vincent, Detroit teacher and psychologist, made the statement in a talk to 800 coeds.

"Your duty," she said, "is to be pleasant hostesses for a few months. Date in teams with other girls, and if you find yourself romantically inclined toward one of the young men, be sure it's not just because he is lonesome and homesick."

District Doctors Mobilized For Wartime Emergencies

By Bert Kemmerer
Post Staff Writer

While final preparations were being concluded at the new Rapid Treatment Center for venereal diseases at Gallinger Hospital for the official opening scheduled for July 12, complete wartime mobilization of Washington physicians was announced yesterday by Dr. A. Magruder MacDonald, chairman, committee on medical service for the District.

Out of 760 physicians who responded to the call for volunteers to serve in emergencies, 338 agreed to be listed on panels to serve patients in their communities in case of an epidemic, mass injuries resulting from bombing or other enemy action, or other catastrophes, except in districts where no other doctors are available.

In the latter case and "dependent upon the course of the war," panels will be used only with the aproval of the physicians who agreed to be listed, Doctor MacDonald explained.

The District of Columbia has been divided into 25 districts, identical with those of the Selective Service System. In each section panels of physicians who will respond to day or night calls have been set up.

Sicily Shakes Under New Bomb Loads

Allied Planes Again Blast Isle Outpost; German Fighter Defense Faltering

Air Force Reports

UNITED STATES EIGHTH Air Force bombers in year dropped 11,423 tons of bombs on Europe and shot down 1199 enemy planes, with loss of 276 American craft, an average of 3.91 per cent. Page 5.

Opposition Dwindling

By Daniel De Luce
Associated Press Staff Writer

Allied Headquarters in North Africa, July 7.—German fighter opposition dwindled precipitately on Sicily yesterday under the violent day and night hammering by Allied warplanes, indicating the enemy had lost most of his land-based aircraft on the island and was badly in need of reinforcements.

Flying Fortress and Liberator heavy bombers, medium and light bombers all joined in the round the clock effort to sweep the enemy entirely from above the Mediterranean island flanking southern Italy.

The main target was the bomb-pocked Gerbini airport and its four subsidiary fields in southern Sicily.

Air Fields Nearly Done In

Fifty Liberators attacked from Middle East bases, dumping more than 285,000 pounds of bombs on runways and dispersal areas and setting large fires. The Fortresses from French Africa hit ammunition dumps, administration buildings, hangars and five landing strips.

The only challenge mentioned was to the Liberators, which shot down one, probably bagged another and damaged two more.

British Wellingtons bombed Gerbini on Monday night.

Experts at headquarters, poring over reconnaissance photos which pictured the tremendous destruction, said the task of rubbing Gerbini's five air fields from the map was nearing completion.

Port Reported Closed

Five Allied planes were lost yesterday; they shot down three. The score for the Northwest Africa Air Force since the fall of Pantelleria thus rose to 275 Axis craft destroyed at an expenditure of 83 planes. A headquarters informant said experience showed that more planes were destroyed aground than aloft in attacks such as the current ones on Sicily, meaning that the rate of attrition was six

Red Lines Hold Against Surge Of 450,000 Men In Nazi Drive

By the Associated Press

London (Thursday), July 8.—The German army in three days has suffered the most staggering losses in its history—30,000 dead, 1539 tanks destroyed or damaged and 649 airplanes shot down—and has failed to achieve a major break-through in its gigantic gamble in Russia, it was broadcast early today by Moscow.

The Axis hurled 30 divisions, or approximately 450,000 men, against the Russians on the Orel-Kursk-Belgorod sector, but "did not catch our troops unawares," said a special Soviet announcement recorded here by the Soviet monitor.

"Only a few sections of the Belgorod area has the enemy, at the cost of enormous losses, succeeded in driving insignificant wedges into our defenses."

The regular midnight bulletin had acknowledged the German capture of an additional "few villages" Wednesday in the Belgorod sector at the end of the flaming 200-mile front where two villages already had been taken by the enemy during Tuesday's fighting.

The later Soviet announcement made no attempt to minimize the power of the German threat, but said flatly that "in the first three days the Germans, despite the size of their offensive had met with no success."

"Hitler Liars" Taunted

"Hitler headquarters' liars" also were taunted in this confident Moscow broadcast for their original assertion that the Red army, and not the Germans, had launched an offensive.

Berlin broadcasts heard here last night made it clear that the Germans now were admitting their troops were engaged in another major offensive.

The German aim in starting the huge drive last Monday was the quick encirclement and annihilation of Russian forces holding the Kursk salient above Belgorod, Moscow said, but it added that plan has been frustrated by the Red army.

Two special bomber forces and a special fighter force were transferred from western Europe to the Eastern Front between June 9 and 29 to aid in the push, it was said. Axis plane strength elsewhere on the Russian front also was stripped

U. S. Warships Pump Shells Into Kiska

First Sea Attack On Jap-Held Island Since Last August

An American naval task force bombarded the Japanese base on Kiska Island Tuesday night, the Navy announced yesterday, in an attack apparently coordinated with the United States offensive against Japanese defenses in the South Pacific.

The report of the attack on Kiska was very brief. It said only that the enemy was bombarded there and that his shore batteries "did not return the fire."

Great interest was aroused in naval circles here by the bombardment despite the dearth of information about the make-up of the American task force and the strategy which called for the shelling just at this time.

Battleships May Be Present

There was a possibility that battleships were among the attacking vessels. Capital ships participated in the naval support given the operations on Attu Island several weeks ago and may still be assigned to North Pacific duty.

There was also considerable speculation as to why the enemy shore batteries did not return the fire. One theory was that if battleships were employed, the Japanese withheld their reply because they were outranged. Another theory was that the enemy did not wish to reveal the position of his defense batteries by

By Edward T. Folliard

Gen. Henri Honore Giraud, a tall, wiry Frnechman who commands the Allies' fifth largest army, arrived in Washington yesterday for a series of conferences that may have an important bearing on the war and Franco-American relations.

He called on President Roosevelt in the latter's office. Then the President took him and his aides over to the mansion for tea and an hour-long talk. It was the second meeting between the Chief Executive and General Giraud, the first having taken place in Casablanca last winter.

No Martinique Stop

General Giraud, attired in a cream-colored summer uniform without decorations, was not seen to smile until he was leaving the White House. A reporter, who speaks French, asked him if he had stopped off at Martinique on his flight to Washington.

Giraud grinned, waved his finger and said, "Non! Non!" Then, through one of his aides, he added:

"I made a wonderful jump over the ocean, but I did not stop at Martinique."

It appeared, however, that the situation in Martinique was being cleared up, and in a way that certainly must be satisfactory to General Giraud.

From Algiers came news that the French Committee of National Liberation, of which General Giraud and Gen. Charles de Gaulle are cochairmen, had acted to relieve Admiral Georges Robert

Yanks Go Ashore At Two Points; Nip Destroyers, Cruisers Lost

American troops landed on New Georgia Island on opposite sides of the Japanese air base at Munda last Sunday and are closing in on the enemy stronghold, official reports disclosed last night.

A late communique from General MacArthur's headquarters in Australia announced that Allied landings were accomplished at Rice Anchorage, which is on Kula Gulf within 10 miles of Munda, and at Zanana, only 6 miles east of the main enemy base in the Central Solomons.

At the same time, it was officially reported by MacArthur's headquarters that the American sea victory in the Kula Gulf early last Monday morning was a much greater catastrophe for the Japs than had been indicated previously.

At least nine and possibly eleven cruisers and destroyers definitely were sunk in the battle, it was announced. Earlier communiques had said that preliminary dispatches reported six ships probably sunk and four damaged.

U. S. Cruiser Helena Sunk

Only one American ship—the American cruiser Helena—was sunk.

Meanwhile, Allied forces opened a strong drive against the Jap base at Mubo in New Guinea. Our air forces dropped 106 tons of bombs on enemy positions in less than 48 minutes, after which Allied ground forces attacked and captured Observation Hill, a strong enemy position in the area.

The Allied landings near Munda were made prior to the sea battle on Kula Gulf. Our troops landed at Rice Anchorage after American warships bombarded Bairoko, the Jap supply base nearby. The United States destroyer Strong was torpedoed and sunk during this action Saturday night.

During the same night, Allied troops crossed from Rendova Island, and won a foothold at Zanana, evidently under the cover of American artillery fire from Rendova, just off shore.

Munda Appears Doomed

The MacArthur communique added that "patrols made contact along the Barike River."

This seemed to indicate that the two Allied forces landing on opposite sides of Munda had joined forces and were attacking the enemy base.

In view of the American naval victory in Kula Gulf, Munda seems doomed. Cut off, at least temporarily, from aid from the sea, and with the Allies holding superiority in the air, the Jap garrison apparently faces defeat from

Nazi Commentator Admits Allies Are Winning Sub War

New York, July 7 (AP).—Admiral Luetzow, German naval commentator, admitted tonight in a broadcast from Berlin that the Allies now have the upper hand in the U-boat war, C. B. S. quoted the B. B. S. as saying.

"The battle the German U-boats have to wage has become very, very hard," he was reputed to have said.

(A Goteborg, Sweden, newspaper relayed a report from "German opposition quarters" that Nazi elite guards had occupied wharves at the German submarine base of Kiel for two days last week because of disturbances. The paper said leaflets were circulated at Kiel reading: "The U-boat war is also lost. Don't go aboard these floating coffins. End the war! Down with Hitler!")

The demonstrations were said to have forced the action of the government of the French island in seeking an agreement with the United States and a break with Vichy.

A report of the demonstrations received by the Trinidad Guardian said the public manifestations broke out June 24 with crowds shouting "Vive De Gaulle" and singing "The Marseillaise." They were unmolested by the gendarmerie sent to disperse them, the report added.

Committee Selects Marcel Hoppenot For Negotiations

By the Associated Press

Algiers, July 7.—The French Committee of National Liberation today appointed Marcel Hoppenot, who now is in Washington, as a delegate with extraordinary powers to negotiate the return of the French Antilles to the unified empire, a spokesman said.

The only portions of the French Antilles not siding yet with the committee are Martinique and Guadelope, whose administrator, Admiral George Robert, invited the United States last week to name an envoy to discuss a "change" in French authority there.

At the same time, the committee appointed Brig. Gen. Henri Jacomy, commander of the French military forces in the Antilles and French Guiana.

Observers interpreted this to mean that the committee would not consent to retaining Admiral Robert as governor of Martinque, regardless of the outcome of the negotiations. Also, the fact that a military commander has been named while the Antilles are still outside the committee's authority was seen as an indication that the committ-

May Lag in War Production Laid to Plant Alterations

Production changes made necessary by front-line fighting experience, not materials shortages, were responsible for the failure of May war production to exceed April output, War Production Chief Donald M. Nelson revealed yesterday.

It was learned that Nelson also has turned his attention to another factor—what he believes is a tendency on the part of industry and Government to relax and start thinking about postwar restoration of peacetime enterprise.

To head off this type of thinking within his own organization, Nelson has circulated a staff memorandum advising War Production Board officials, "I cannot be too emphatic in saying to you that the time has not yet come when we can afford to indulge in the luxury of peacetime thinking."

Nelson, it was understood, is concerned about the apparent desire of some WPB officials to return home at this time to start mending fences for postwar business.

WPB Executive Vice Chairman Charles E. Wilson, who participated with Nelson in an informal press conference, told reporters that the production record for June appeared to be better than May with "some programs up to expectations, some not."

In planes, June production was practically the same as May in number, but better in terms of total tonnage produced, Wilson said.

Eisenhower Poised For Blow, Nazis Say

2d Front Parley?

Red Envoy In London Goes Home

By Frederick Kuh
Copyright by Chicago Sun

London, July 7.—Premier Josef Stalin has called Ivan Maisky, Soviet Ambassador to London, to Moscow for consultation, it was learned here today. The Ambassador is due to arrive at the Soviet capital within 48 hours.

One unofficial explanation is the Soviet government's reported doubts about the efficacy of the British and American plans for a second front. The opening of a major German offensive against the Red army this week is bound to intensify Moscow's insistence on the urgency of a diversionary campaign in Europe by the western Allies.

Moscow has presumably been given indications of the Allies operational plans for 1943. If, as is widely suggested, they include first the invasion of certain Mediterranean and Aegean islands this month, culminating in landings on Sicily and Sardinia and later an invasion of Italy itself, then Stalin has possibly concluded that such action will fail to draw off the requisite of 600,000 German troops from Russia.

He might hold that view even if our incursion in southern Europe were to be followed this autumn by an attack from Britain against northern or western Europe.

If, as is assumed, Maxim Litvinoff, Soviet Ambassador to Washington, is still in Moscow, it will be natural to enlist Maisky in the deliberations before Litvinoff's return to his post.

Toward the end of June Stalin in a message to President Roosevelt remarked "Victory will be achieved, I have no doubt, all the sooner when we hammer the enemy with our joint and coordinated blows from the west and east."

People asked then why Stalin stressed the need for blows from the west and mentioned the west before the east if he were completely satisfied with our plans. More recently the Soviet press and radio have been increasing second-front propaganda.

Another statesman, President Eduard Bénes of Czechoslovakia intends to go to Moscow soon, probably in the second half of July, and he will be accompanied by Alexander Bogomoloff, the Soviet Ambassador to the government in exile. Benes plans to negotiate and possibly sign a 20-year Czech-Russian military alliance.

Berlin Radio Seeks to Allay Invasion Fears

By the Associated Press

London, July 7.—The German radio told a badly smashed homeland today that the Allied African chieftain, Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, had concentrated more than a million tons of shipping on the African coast for a leap across the Mediterranean into Europe.

This broadcast was tempered by an assertion that the Allies "cannot launch a real invasion" because of the so-called resolute defenses in southern France and Italy.

To Allied observers these propaganda soundings followed the familiar pattern of touching both ends of the keyboard but not the middle. The Axis still had not mentioned the British commando attack on Crete, a successful invasion feeler carried out Sunday night on that important Greek outpost.

Resistance Stressed

In other words, Berlin was warning that something was going to happen—a quite obvious fact from Allied statements—but was stressing reports of Axis ability to combat any stab.

There was a hint of the British Crete operation in one German broadcast which said that a "sabotage attempt" against an airfield there had been frustrated by German guards. This, of course, left the impression that Greek guerillas might have descended upon the airport.

Greek and Yugoslav guerillas still are battling in the mountains of those two countries, and the spread of these operations was evident in Vichy dispatches to Madrid saying that American and British planes have been supplying French patriots for some time with parachuted arms, food, munitions and money.

The Germans said Gen. Draja Mihailovic's Yugoslav forces "for the most part have been wiped out," and that "mopping-up operations also made good progress in Greece in the last few days."

Cairo dispatches quoted the Hellenic news service as reporting a battle between the Italians and Greek guerillas in the Trikkala area on the slopes of the vital pass on the main east-west road from Yannina to Larissa.

The dispatch said guerillas had killed an Italian unit commander and captured 60 men.

Swiss dispatches from Budapest also quoted Axis press reports as saying that a wave of unrest, directed against Bulgarian occupation armies as well as Germans and Italians, had increased throughout Yugoslavia.

Dispatches to Madrid that passed Vichy censorship reported one captured parachute cargo in France was said to contain 800,000 American dollars. Stacks of French franc notes also were dropped, the newspaper Ya reported, with a resulting rise in the value of the franc.

Troops Sent to Dodecanese

The Algiers radio said that the Germans had sent fresh troops to the Dodecanese Islands in the eastern Mediterranean, putting a further strain on German industry and manpower.

A British Ministry of Economic Warfare spokesman said the Nazi armament industry has been striving to replace equipment loss at Stalingrad and in North Africa, and "probably is not keeping up with its losses in locomotives." But he said the flow of war goods, particularly defensive weapons, has been fairly well maintained.

This survey admittedly was made without the benefit of late news through underground channels which frequently is delayed two months. At variance with this conservative view, however, was an Air Ministry report that two-thirds of the central areas of Duesseldorf, Germany's third largest inland port and a vital railway and industrial hub, had been burned and smashed by R. A. F. raids. This statement was based on air reconnaissance photographs which showed that 42 of the city's factories were severely damaged, including five plants "of the greatest importance."

or seven to one in favor of the Allies.

Other targets were scattered airdromes in Sicily, including the Biscari and Milo Fields, and railway installations at the east Sicilian port of Catania. The Italian radio said Palermo, Trapani, Porto Empedocle and Marsala also were attacked and that 19 Allied planes were destroyed.

The Algiers radio said the twice-bombed Port of Ostia, near Rome at the mouth of the Tiber, had been closed to the public as a result of the raid Saturday night.

(Middle East headquarters at Cairo amplified its account of the raid on Messina in Sicily Monday. The 85 American Liberators dropped a record of a half million pounds of bombs on the ferry terminal, 2 miles across the deep, swift channel to the Italian mainland.

("Aerial photography now indicates that damage to terminal facilities and railway facilities was even more extensive than first reported," it was stated.)

strong American columns closing in from the north and east.

Capture of Munda and its auxiliary airfields would give the Allies aerial bases much closer to Rabaul—key enemy center in the South Pacific. The fall of the central Solomons would put the northwest Solomons—only one close step from Rabaul—not only directly under our air attacks but within reach of direct assault.

Last night's communique from MacArthur's headquarters declared that "amplifying reports of the Battle of Kula Gulf during the early hours of July 6 (Monday morning here) indicate that the enemy naval force was decisively defeated with the loss of at least nine warships."

"In the first phase of the engagement," the communique stated, "four or five hostile destroyers were struck by smashing broadsides that within five minutes destroyed or set afire the entire group.

"Three or possibly four enemy light cruisers were then taken under fire. All were either sunk or afire within 15 minutes. One was beached.

"Later, during the rescue of survivors from the light cruiser Helena, our destroyers intercepted and sank two or three enemy ships attempting to escape from the gulf and damaged the third."

The MacArthur communique also reported that 12 additional Jap planes had been lost in attacks over Rendova Island with the destruction of only 1 American aircraft.

Control of Air, Sea

A large force of enemy bombers, escorted by 56 Zeros was intercepted by the American fighter patrol and 3 Nip bombers and fighters were shot down with the loss of only 1 Allied plane. Vila, the Jap air base on nearby Kolombangara Island, also was heavily raided, as were enemy bases in the northwest Solomons.

The smashing of the enemy cruiser-destroyer force in the Battle of Kula Gulf and the new landings on New Georgia Island near Munda have left the Jap garrisons in the area in grave danger of annihilation. For the time being at least, Allied forces have control of the air and sea in the central Solomons and are apparently pouring ashore near Munda superior land forces.

The Navy communique identified the American cruiser sunk in the battle as the 9700-ton Helena, built at the New York Navy Yard and put into service in September, 1939. There was no word of the fate of her crew, including the skipper, Capt. Charles P. Cecil of Louisville, Ky. Associated Press dispatches from the South Pacific, however, said that most of the crew was picked up and that many probably reached shore.

The Helena was one of the ships damaged by the Japs at Pearl Harbor.

Yesterday's Navy communique told of continuing American air attacks on enemy bases in the Solomons. Army Liberators attacked Kahili and Buka Island in the northwest Solomons Monday night, starting fires.

Russians Kill 30,000 Germans as Lines Hold Against Surge of 450,000 Men to make possible the great concentration between Belgorod and Orel, Moscow said.

Fifteen tank divisions, one motorized division, and 14 infantry divisions are being used in the offensive, it added.

Villages Change Hands

The German advance was made in great battle fury, during which lines and trenches and even entire villages changed hands time and again. The Russians said their troops were counterattacking late last night and "are now fighting to restore the position."

The Russian said that elsewhere along the fiery front the Germans were stopped cold.

Earlier, a special communique had told of the Germans rushing up vast reserves and listed huge new Nazi tank and plane losses which staggered the imagination.

During Wednesday alone, the Russians said, the Germans lost 520 tanks and 229 planes.

Wednesday's Nazi tank toll included 40 of the crack 60-ton "Tiger" tanks, the Germans' latest land battleships.

Until today the Germans had maintained that the Russians were the ones launching the offensive, but late last night Berlin radio military commentators declared flatly that the Germans, "originally on the defensive," now were waging an all-out attack.

"For the third time at the Eastern Front," said the Transocean military commentator, Lieut. Kurt Jeserich, "the Germans have launched an offensive out of originally defensive positions."

"The Battle of Kursk is on," said this commentator at another point, perhaps indicating the Nazis' first objectives for a possible wheeling movement toward Moscow itself.

Foe Rushing Reserves

The Germans asserted that their troops had made "deep penetrations" in the Orel sector as well as at Belgorod despite the resistance of $400,000 crack Soviet troops supported by very strong tank and artillery forces."

Both Berlin and Moscow said the Germans were rushing reserves and materiel to the front line, including aircraft.

A German broadcast recorded by the Associated Press supported this statement, saying that a "very large air force" had been concentrated against the Russians and that "air force battles now going on over the Kursk region are surpassing in extent and violence everything hitherto experienced during the whole eastern campaign."

"The Germans," said the Transocean report, "are throwing more aircraft into action than the Anglo-Saxons ever did in the fight for Tunisia."

Germany appeared to be making a dangerous gamble with her war equipment.

"Never before were German soldiers better trained or better equipped with the latest arms than those troops now fighting the Battle of Kursk," said the Berlin broadcast.

This confident German commitment on the strength of its forces was threaded with notes of caution, however.

"The Soviets," on their part, are also sending into action tanks of a new type," the Nazi war reporter said. "The Battle of Kursk therefore means the first clash of new German and new Soviet weapons. The efficiency of these new weapons will show itself in due course."

American Tanks, Planes

Many American tanks and planes were being used by the Russians to combat this new onslaught, Berlin said.

An example of the ferocity was given in a Moscow broadcast which said that in a single attack near Belgorod the Germans hurled more than 100 tanks against the Red army. Seventy-four of these were knocked out, said the broadcast.

Government Rests In Viereck Case

12,500,000 Pay

Most Britons Taxed Third Of Income

By the Associated Press

London, July 7.—Reporting that the average Briton last year paid about one-third of his income to support the war, Sir Kingsley Wood, chancellor of the exchequer, told Commons today that he hoped a pay-as-you-go tax plan could be devised for Britain.

Sir Kingsley, replying to demands inspired by the United States' example in pay-as-you-go taxation, promised a statement at early autumn.

He disclosed these tax facts at the end of a debate on a finance bill:

The budget expenditure this year will be eight times that of 1933-34.

Taxes last year took 40 per cent of all private income.

Taxes now are paid by 12.500,000 Britons, of whom 10,000,000 are small taxpayers.

The war expenditure already has doubled that of 1914-18.

Britain already has borrowed a sum more than double the size of the national debt before the war began.

The nation must borrow half the money it spends this year.

Ralph Assheton, financial secretary to the treasury, reported Britain's public debt now totals £17,700,000,000 ($70,800,000,000), compared with £8,163,000,000 ($32,652,000,000) at the outbreak of the war.

"Despite the size of the debt there is no reason why our finances should not remain as satisfactory in the fifth year of war and if necessary in further years of war as they have been, provided the people continue ready to make the sacrifices they now are making," he said.

Sir Kingsley said the British government thus far had advanced £195,000,000 ($780,000,000) to Allied governments, exclusive of the lend-lease aid it had provided.

Agent's Reports To Berlin Placed In Trial Record

By Adele Bernstein
Post Staff Writer

The United States Government rested its case against German agent, George Sylvester Viereck, late yesterday afternoon, after a day of sensational testimony with which Prosecutors George A. McNulty and Albert E. Arent will ask conviction on six violations of the Foreign Agents Registration Act.

Highlighting yesterday's courtroom scene was a series of exhibits based on lengthy pro-Nazi reports on American public opinion Viereck sent by devious routes to the German government in Berlin a few short months before Pearl Harbor. This was the period during which their author, in a sworn statement to the State Department, claimed to be acting merely as "author and publicist" for an independent German newspaper, the Muenchner Neueste Nachrichten, and employe of the German Library of Information in New York City.

Intercepted by British

Intercepted by the British imperial censorship in Bermuda in late summer of 1941, the reports were en route to various prearranged way stations in Lisbon, Portugal. Each was enclosed in two envelopes—the outer one directed to an innocuous-sounding address in the neutral capital. Inside, however, another envelope bore the name of Dr. Hans Heinrich Dieckhoff, German Foreign Office, Berlin. Dr. Dieckhoff was the official German Ambassador to the United States, at that time recalled to Germany.

These reports, made available by the imperial censorship in Bermuda, a member of whose staff, Miss Mayda Gardner, testified yesterday, show an amazing combination of naivete and careful study of trends in American thinking:

"Senator Holt has written two books on the subject (the financial interests behind the war-mongers) which will shortly be published by an enterprising, patriotic American firm. I shall send you these books as soon as they are available . . . Flanders Hall has just published a sensational and courageous book by Stephen A. Day, Congressman-at-Large for the State of Illinois, a Republican . . . Mr. William J. Donovan, who used to be so pro-German and was dined and wined by Dr. Borchers, is to coordinate all intelligence services as well as counterespionage," Viereck complained.

Reactions Discussed

Other similar reports discussed at length reactions in the American press, radio and Congress of events in Europe and Nazi Germany, all hopefully citing the "growing sentiments" for a peace offensive among the American people. At one point, however, after declaring that Catholic sentiment here against war is growing stronger, he wrote peevishly: "It is very unfortunate that at this very moment the bishops of greater Germany allegedly issued a pastoral letter assailing Nazi steps against the church in connection with the school problem."

A description of the Foreign Office, the Ministry of Public Enlightenment and Propaganda, and their personnel, including Dr. Paul J. Goebbels, was made by Dr. R. M. W. Kempner who took the stand for the Government during the morning. An expert on German law, administration and government, which he is currently teaching at the University of Pennsylvania to prospective occupational police, Dr. Kempner declared that the Munich nwspaper for which Viereck worked was controlled and staffed by Goebbels' own ministry.

Other Witnesses

Adding their testimony to the Government's case yesterday were H. Charles Spruks, a State Department official; Mrs. Phyllis Spielman, secretary to the late Senator Lundeen; Sigrid Schultz, Berlin correspondent for the Chicago Tribune; James V. Blaine, special FBI agent, and Dr. Paul Schwarz, former German Consul at Large for New York State.

Counsels Leo A. Rover and John Wilson will open their defense of Viereck on Monday. In adjourning the case until then, Justice Bolitha J. Laws repeated earlier instructions to the jury of seven men and five women not to read or listen to reports on the trial.

Norway Reports Nazi Desertions

London, July 7 (AP).—Norwegian sources in London reported today Gen. Nikolaus von Falkenhorst, German commander in Norway, had posted notices in military camps taking cognizance of the "shameful and disgraceful" increase in desertions among the Nazi occupation forces.

These sources said their information was obtained from an underground newspaper smuggled from Norway. The deserting soldiers were reported to have fled to Sweden.

Eden Predicts Japs Will Be Crushed

Lauds Chinese People on War's 6th Anniversary; Chiang Decorated

By the Associated Press

London, July 7.—Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden declared today that the day would come when the accumulated weight of the Allied power would "flow eastward and overwhelm the Empire of Japan."

Speaking at a "Salute to China" meeting, Eden said "there is in our hearts a fixed and grim resolve to teach Japan once and for all the lesson that coprosperity is not achieved by cruelty and oppression and that he who draws the sword shall perish by it."

Paying tribute to the Chinese people on the sixth anniversary of their war with Japan, Eden declared, "every thrust against the Axis in Europe brings us nearer to the day when the full force of the United Nations can be brought to bear against Japan. . . . Our great bomber offensive is only a prelude to heavier blows."

Eden declared that if the defeat of Japan is to lead to a lasting peace, it must be more than the physical defeat of her armed forces, which in itself will involve no mean effort.

"It must also be the defeat of those ideas which for more than a decade have been cultivated in the minds of the Japanese by their militarist leaders, to the exclusion of everything that is reasonable and humane," Eden said.

Chungking, July 7 (AP).—Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek was decorated today as chief commander of the Legion of Merit, by Lieut. Gen. Joseph W. Stilwell, United States commanding general for China, India and Burma, representing President Roosevelt.

Gen. Ho Ying-chin, minister of war and chief of staff, and Gen. Shang Chen, director of the National Military Council, were made commanders of the Legion of Merit while Gen. Yu Ta-wei, chief of ordnance, was made an officer of the legion.

The decorations were presented in the presence of Mme. Chiang Kai-shek, making her first appearance since her return to China from the United States.

First Such Awards

The medals, bestowed on the sixth anniversary of China's war of resistance against the Japanese, were the first given to any Allied war figures since the legion's revival by President Roosevelt during the present war.

Gap Widening Between Capital and Labor

WORST LONG-RANGE problem worrying Administration leaders during the hectic closing days of Congress was the ever-widening gap between factions of the American people similar to that which preceded the fall of France.

In France, a labor government had its own way to such extent under Blum that public reaction veered in the opposite direction, labor was in the public doghouse and reactionaries were in the saddle. Labor became bitter, sulky, uncooperative, while big French business had its sway.

Neither side would cooperate. Both hated each other. So France fell.

Today, in the U. S. A., public reaction against labor hit the full swing of the pendulum with the antistrike bill. Labor had enjoyed the largest degree of power under Roosevelt ever achieved by American unions in their entire history. Now, as in France, labor is in the national doghouse.

Whether it remains there is the big question; also whether labor becomes sulky, bitter and uncooperative as in France. Upon the ability of both sides to cooperate, to see the other side's viewpoint, is going to depend a great many things in this country—not only winning the war, but the kind of Government we have after the war is over.

War Profits

THE WAR PRODUCTION BOARD has just made a study of certain war industries, the result of which is not going to help labor's mood. The WPB shows the profits of airplane companies from war contracts, which even after deducting taxes, are enormous. These profit figures are based upon invested capital.

For instance, North American Aviation, which suffered a strike and seizure of its California operation by the Government, made 51.06% profit in 1941 after paying taxes. Before paying taxes its profits were 134.53%. North American's 1940 profits were even higher—57.33% after deducting taxes.

Consolidated Aircraft, another big company, made the gigantic profit of 94% in 1941 after paying taxes. Boeing, which turns out bombers, made 25%; Curtiss-Wright, 41.9%; and Douglas 51%. All these were after paying taxes. Consolidated, incidentally, made 309% before paying taxes.

Bell Aircraft, which is building a big bomber plant in Georgia, made 36% in 1941; Sperry Gyroscope, 37.9%; Ryan Aeronautical, manufacturing faulty engines despite Government inspectors' opposition, made the juicy profit of 45.7% in 1941 and 250% before deducting taxes.

These lush war profits, taken together with congressional adoption of the Ruml tax, plus congressional veto of the $25,000 salary ceiling, plus current talk of a sales tax, is not going to help lessen the rift between capital and labor, already increased by the coal mine, antistrike bill controversies.

NOTE: Labor leaders didn't announce it, but on the day after Congress overrode the antistrike veto, they launched plans to have every worker in the country register so as to be able to vote in 1944.

Ambassador Joe Davies

Ambassador Joe Davies, whose film "Mission to Miscow" has done a great service for better understanding of Russia, has been subject to a lot of twitting from his socialite pals.

The other day a group of them attended a private showing of the Davies film. At the start of the picture, Joe Davies himself, looking very dignified, comes on the screen and explains why he sponsored the film, namely, because of the importance of understanding Russia. Among other things, he says:

"I am not a communist. I am a capitalist."

"When I knew him," whispered Sir Willmott Lewis of the London Times loudly, "he was a lobbyist."

Gas-Less Auto Race

AN AUTOMOBILE race was staged in Brazil recently which should interest gasless Americans. Thirty-two cars took part, and not one of them used a drop of gasoline.

Each car was equipped with a charcoal-burning apparatus known as "gasogene," producing a charcoal gas whose combustion takes the place of the combustion of gasoline in the ordinary automobile engine.

...These devices have been so successful in Brazil that they are being produced at the rate of 40 a day, selling for about $200 each. Some of the units are capable of generating a thousand horsepower and are used on the intercity buses between Santos and Sao Paulo.

Brazil has practically no petroleum resources of her own.

Jones and Little Business

SOMETIME AGO, Guy Holcomb, energetic crusader for the little businessman, got an appointment with Secretary of Commerce Jesse Jones to urge that he set up in the Commerce Department a bureau to aid little business.

Secretary Jones listened attentively while Holcomb outlined his plan, finally interrupted:

"What are the problems of small business?"

Holcomb looked astonished.

Jones continued: "All small business ever wanted of me was to borrow Government money."

"No, they don't want to borrow money," disputed Holcomb, "they want a square deal. They are not chiselers."

"Well, you get me up a brief on the problems of small business," replied Jones, "and I'll study it."

"Mr. Jones," Holcomb answered, "I appreciate your listening to me, but if you don't know by this time as Secretary of Commerce what the problems of small business are, then I haven't got time to educate you. Thanks for the interview and the privilege of meeting you after all these years."

Tuscaloosa News Freezes Circulation

Tuscaloosa, Ala., July 7 (AP).—Following the WPB order reducing the supply of newsprint to daily newspapers, Bruce Shelton, publisher of the Tuscaloosa News, announced today the News would "freeze" its circulation immediately until further notice.

"No new subscribers will be accepted by us except as replacements for old ones. As things now stand, we can serve all present subscribers without reducing the quality of our publication. We regret the necessity of this act but know of no other answer to he problem," the publisher said.

Skipper of Cutter Campbell Describes Nazi Sub Sinking

When you are battling the North Atlantic's most vicious weather plus A. Hitler's most vicious wolf-pack of U-boats, a whiff of kerosene can smell sweeter than $10-per-dram perfume — so says Comdr. James A. Hirshfield, who learned on the Coast Guard cutter Campbell that a kerosene odor means another Nazi sub won't get around much more.

HIRSHFIELD

Speaking yesterday at the Heroes' Day program of the Lions Club at the Mayflower Hotel, Commander Hirshfield, skipper of the Campbell, described the tortuous Atlantic voyage late in February, when the Campbell sank a U-boat and attacked five others during a 12-hour running fight with the Nazis.

On his blouse Commander Hirshfield wore the Navy Cross, awarded him last week for valorous action aboard the Campbell, and the Purple Heart, which he received after he was the lone casualty on the ship, injured by a piece of richocheting metal.

"The Campbell had left the convoy to ascertain if subs were in the area when she met her first U-boat," he recalled. "We dropped depth charges and then we got that whiff of kerosene—I never realized how wonderful it could smell.

"We had four other brushes with U-boats, during which we dropped other depth charges—but war on the sea is just like hunting; you have to bring back the meat to prove that you got the game.

"Radar picked up this last fellow, the sub we finally rammed, about 8:15 that evening, but it was so black on the Atlantic that we couldn't see him until we were within about 400 yards. He was heading the same way we were, so we got only a glancing blow at him, but the impact of the ramming was so great that our own engine room was flooded. The U-boat sank and we picked up survivors, but of course we are not allowed to question them. That job is left to expert intelligence men on shore."

The act of getting the sub was "rather easy," Commander Hirshfield said with a grin; "You don't stop to think what might happen to you then—but the tough part is waiting."

The Gampbell's engines were immobilized by the flood of water that engulfed them, so her crew had tc wait two days for a tug to arrive and tow her to port.

Postal Zone Numbers

The Railway Express Agency yesterday requested all shippers use postal zone numbers when shipping packages.

Correct addressing of shipments calls for complete information about sender and receiver, including name, street number, location and city.

Labor Organizes Political Branch

C. I. O. Committee's Makeup Interpreted As Indicating Support of New Deal

Organized labor made its first move toward preparing for the 1944 presidential campaign yesterday with the announcement by C. I. O. President Philip Murray of the appointment of a five-man C. I. O. "political action" committee to consider possible formation of a "labor league."

The committee is headed by Sidney Hillman, president of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America, one of the leading New Deal Democrats in the C. I. O. and a close friend of President Roosevelt.

The action was announced yesterday by Murray after it received the approval of the C. I. O. executive board, meeting in Washington.

Not Firing Opening Gun

Murray emphasized that he was not firing the opening gun for the formation of a third party representing labor. He said the committee "will seek the active participation of other labor and interested groups."

It was believed that it would be similar to Labor's Nonpartisan League, an organization which John L. Lewis, founder of the C. I. O., formed to support President Roosevelt in the 1936 campaign. It still exists, but has become inactive.

The pro-New Deal character of the committee membership was taken as an indication that the move might be aimed at supporting a fourth term for the President, although Murray refused to comment on the action's 1944 implications.

In addition to Hillman, the committee consists of R. J. Thomas, president of the United Automobile Workers, as secretary, Sherman Dalrymple, president of the United Rubber Workers, Albert J. Fitzgerald, president of the United Electrical Workers and either Van A. Bittner or David J. McDonald to represent the United Steel Workers, the union headed by Murray.

To Report in Fall

The committee was instructed to report back to the C. I. O. executive board in the fall, Murray said. It was expected that it would make overtures to other labor groups before that time.

No-Strike Pledge Indorsed

The board also indorsed Murray's action reaffirming the C. I. O.'s no-strike pledge following the passage of the Connally-Smith Act over the President's veto and blamed Lewis as president of the United Mine Workers for the enactment of the measure.

"The labor-baiting and Administration-hating forces in Congress enacted this vicious antilabor measure to wreak vengeance for the acts of one individual who flouted the needs of the Nation for continuous production of vital war materials, ignored the machinery established for the adjustment of all labor disputes in order to guarantee continuous production, and recklessly caused a national strike in the coal fields."

The executive board adopted a resolution criticizing Congress for ending the existence of the National Resources Planning Board "without holding any committee hearings of its own postwar problems."

"A new agency should immediately be established to plan for peace at home," the C. I. O. said.

Referee Urges Divorce for Jack Dempsey

By the Associated Press

White Plains, N. Y., July 7.—Former Heavyweight Boxing Champion Jack Dempsey won today a referee's decision in his marital battle with the former Hannah Williams, one-time singing star of Broadway musical comedy.

Official Referee J. Addison Young awarded Dempsey, now a lieutenant commander in the Coast Guard, a decree of divorce, ruling that "the charge of the defendant's infidelity alleged in the amended complaint as occurring November 22, 1942, at Los Angeles, Calif., was proven beyond doubt."

He referred to Dempsey's allegation that his wife had been intimate with Benny Woodall, trainer of prizefighters, in a West Coast bungalow.

As far as it went, the 70-word decision was a sweeping victory for Dempsey. Young dismissed Mrs. Dempsey's counterclaim for a separation.

Among the questions left to be determined was the custody of the two Dempsey children, Barbara, 6, and Joan, 8. They are living in their father's Scarsdale, N. Y., home.

Under routine legal procedures which will be followed in this case, Dempsey's attorney will submit to the court for approval statements of the findings in the case. If approved by the court, interlocutory judgment would be entered, setting the period of time which must elapse before the decree becomes final.

Referee Young ruled he would "consider the question of the custody of the children and other relevant matters" when the interlocutory judgment was settled.

Rites Set Today For C. F. Maught

Funeral services for C. Frank Maught, 90, retired farmer, who died Tuesday at the home of his nephew, Conrad W. Maught, Middletown, Md., will take place at 11:30 a. m. today from the funeral home of W. Reuben Pumphrey at Rockville. The Rev. Claude A. Brubaker, pastor of Mount Zion Baptist Church, near Beane, Md., will conduct the services and burial will be in Rockville Union Cemetery.

Mr. Maught, a Montgomery County resident for 77 years, was unmarried. He had made his home with his nephew for the past three years. For many years he operated a small farm near Montrose, Md.

Argentine Circles World in Ketch

Buenos Aires, July 7 (AP).—Vito Dumas, Argentine sailor who set out June 27, 1942, to circumnavigate the war-torn globe in a 30-foot ketch, arrived back home today after his long, solitary voyage.

Dumas visited Capetown, South Africa, on the first leg of his trip, then proceeded on to Australia and New Zealand. He reached Valparaiso, Chile, several weeks ago, and then completed his voyage by rounding Cape Horn, the first yachtsman to do so from west to east.

R. W. Forster, White House Aide Under 8 Presidents, Is Dead

Roosevelt Praises Executive Clerk for Faithful Services

Rudolph W. Forster, 70, executive clerk of the White House who served under eight Presidents, died early yesterday in his apartment in the Waramen.

Apparently the victim of a heart attack, Mr. Forster was found about 7 a. m. by Mrs. Rufus H. Maurer, his sister-in-law, who customarily brought him his breakfast from her nearby apartment.

Mr. Forster, who entered into the service of the White House on a "temporary basis" shortly after President McKinley took office, was executive clerk in charge of White House executive offices at the time of his death. He was at work Tuesday, a White House spokesman said, and apparently felt "fine."

Early Announces Death

Formal announcement of his death was made by White House Secretary Stephen T. Early who said that "the day was one of special sadness around the executive offices because of Mr. Forsters' passing."

Last fall, when Mr. Forster reached the retirement age, President Roosevelt issued an executive order exempting him and attached the following note to the order:

"This is permanent. I don t want either of you to leave me as long as I'm here. F. D. R." (This referred to Mr. Forster and Maurice C. Latta, another veteran employe of the White House.)

Mr. Forster was born October 30, 1872, in Washington and was a Government stenographer when he was called to the White House in March, 1897. President Roosevelt issued a statement in tribute to him, which reads in part:

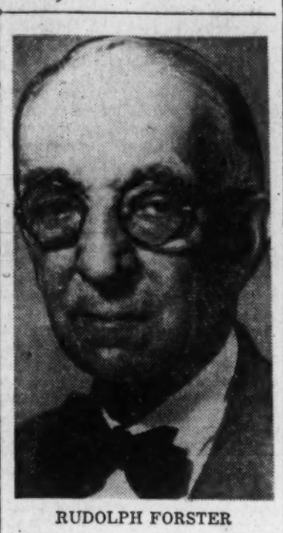
Roosevelt's Statement

"My friendship with him went back to the administration of Theodore Roosevelt. It was continued even more closely during the Wilson administration. And when I returned to Washington on March 4, 1933, it was a great help and a happy thing to find an old and true friend still at the head of the White House offices.

"For the work which made him a tower of strength in our White House organization, Rudolph Forster had unique gifts."

Surviving are his son, Warren R. Forster, vice president of the Hamilton Bank; a sister, Mrs. W. J. Armstrong of Takoma Park, Md., and two grandchildren, Rudolph Forster 2d and Joan Forster.

Funeral services will be held tomorrow at 2:30 p. m. at Central Presbyterian Church, Fifteenth and Irving Streets Northwest. Private interment will be at Rock Creek Cemetery.



RUDOLPH FORSTER

Funeral Today For Mrs. Griffith

Funeral services will be held at 11 a. m. today for Mrs. Alice Waters Griffith, native and former resident of Germantown, Md., who died in a Baltimore Hospital Tuesday after a prolonged illness.

The services will be held at the Neelesville Presbyterian Church near Germantown, with the Rev. William B. Waters of Rockville officiating. Burial will be in the church cemetery.

Mrs. Griffith, who was a daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Perrie E. Waters of Germantown, is survived by her husband, C. Dade Griffith, two daughters, Miss Ellen Griffith of Rocky Mount, N. C., and Miss Elizabeth Griffith of Baltimore; two sisters, Mrs. Thomas Butler of Baltimore, and Mrs. Beverly Davis of Rocky Mount, N. C.; two brothers, Clinton Waters of Baltimore, and Richard L. Waters of Carson City, Nev.

8th Air Force Losses Average Only 3.91% In 7067 Sorties Over Hitler's Europe in Year

By the Associated Press

The Army reported yesterday this summary of the first year's operations of the Eighth Air Force over Europe—68 daylight bombing missions, 102 industrial targets, naval bases and war plants destroyed or damaged by a total of 11,423 tons of bombs, and 1199 enemy planes shot down.

Losses were 276 American heavy bombers. However, in addition to the enemy aircraft confirmed as destroyed, gunners of the Eighth Air Force probably destroyed 525 more, and damaged 501.

The losses of American planes averaged only 3.91 per cent in 7067 sorties against Germany and German-occupied Europe, a sortie being a single flight by one plane.

American bombing operations in the European theater began July 4 last year when American crews manned six A-20 Bostons (light bombers) of the Royal Air Force and accompanied six R. A. F.-manned planes on a daylight attack against Nazi objectives in the Netherlands.

Twelve months later, on Independence Day this year, the operations had grown until formations of several hundred heavy bombers attacked Le Mans, Nantes and La Pallice, dropping 544 tons of bombs. In this operation they shot down 46 German planes, scored 36 probables, and damaged 7, while losing 8.

German fighter opposition has increased markedly as operations of the Eighth Air Force have increased, the department related, but Maj. Gen. Ira C. Eaker, commanding general of the force, reported that the morale of the bomber crews is as high as ever.

"None of the crews has a feeling that they are overmatched," Eaker wrote. "The bomber crews have a complete confidence, in their ability to take a heavy toll of German fighters."

A monthly box score since August disclosed that the heaviest total of bombs—2865½ tons—was dropped by the American bombers in May. That month also saw the greatest destruction of enemy interceptors — 340 definitely destroyed, 108 probables, 167 damaged. The Eighth Air Force lost 67.

The costliest month to the Americans was June, 1943, when they lost 85 heavy bombers while dropping 2458 tons of bombs and destroying 304 enemy planes, with 69 probables and 121 damaged.

War Sidelights

End of International Party Splits Communists in China

Chungking, July 7 (AP).—The dissolution of the Communist International, announced recently from Moscow, has caused a split in the Chinese Communist Party, a government spokesman told a press conference today.

One group of Chinese Communists, he said, are inclined to accept entirely the authority of the Chinese general Government, while others "still hold to the Comintern school of thought," that is, favor retention of International Communist ties.

The spokesman said the party crisis was the reason for the recent departure for Yenan, the Communist stronghold and quasi-capital in Shensi Province, of Chou En-lai, one of the Communist big three who has been serving in Chungking as the Communists' resident representative. Chou has gone to straighten out the party's differences, the spokesman said.

Galkin Named Corporal

Fort Myers, Fla., July 7 (AP).—Bernard Galkin, author of a best-selling manual, "How to Get a Commission in the Army, Navy, Marines, Coast Guard and Merchant Marine," has been promoted to the grade of corporal at Buckingham Army Air Field, near Fort Myers.

Galkin's book has sold more than 75,000 copies. He himself was unable to take advantage of his information before his draft board nabbed him last summer.

Russians Find Oil

Moscow, July 7 (AP).—The government newspaper Izvestia announced today that new oil fields had been discovered in Azerbaijan which were expected to become second in importance only to those at Baku, capital of that republic.

The fields were said to be remarkable not only for the quantity but the quality of the oil, making them a valuable source of high octane aviation gasoline.

U. S. Troops Lauded

London, July 7 (AP).—The Daily Express said in an editorial today that the British people "praise the splendid bearing and good manners of the American armed forces in our midst" because "they take into full account our proprietorial rights."

Escaping Slayer Hangs

Hamilton, Bermula, July 7 (AP).—Harry Sousa, 23, convicted rape-slayer who enjoyed a brief period of liberty yesterday when he escaped from the Hamilton jail 2 hours before he was to have been hanged, was dropped through the trap at 6:15 this morning.

After his escape he was discovered hiding in a waterfront cave.

New Zealanders Sink Japanese Sub

Wellington, New Zealand, July 6 (Delayed) (AP).—Prime Minister Peter Fraser announced today a Hudson bomber manned by a New Zealand crew operating from Guadalcanal in the Solomons had sunk a large Japanese submarine.

There is reason to believe an air attack on another enemy submarine also was successful, Fraser said.

Devers Meets King

D. C. Doctors Mobilized For Wartime

In event of emergency, a complete list of "effective" doctors is now being prepared and will be available within three weeks, Theodore Whiprud, secretary of the District Medical Society, said.

Records of 939 doctors in the District Medical Bureau, the Medical Society's 24-hour telephone service, already are on file.

Panels on which the 338 doctors will serve already have been turned over to the bureau. Of those listed 189 were general practitioners and 128 specialists. The latter agreed to do general practice if necessary.

Listing of members of the Medico-Chirurgical (medicine and surgery) Society of the District composed of Negro physicians has not yet been completed.

The Medical Bureau, 1718 M Street Northwest, now in its third year of operation, in an emergency will transmit calls to physicians.

Greater Personnel

Simultaneously with the mobilization announcement of District physicians came the announcement from Whiprud of the enlargement of the bureau's personnel.

"Last month" the secretary explained, "7008 recorded calls were handled by the bureau. However, no record was kept of hundreds of inquiries. Requests for names of doctors, of which a record is kept, are continual.

"The bureau has at its disposal a list of physicians in the District carefully classified according to specialty and in the case of general practitioners according to location.

"In addition to its regular service, the bureau has telephone connections with Doctors, Emergency, Garfield, Providence and Sibley Hospitals so that calls can be transmitted to and from these institutions by physicians and their patients without delay.

"It takes many weeks to train operators for their task. Even then unforeseen circumstances arise which test their resourcefulness. For example, there are endless varieties of so-called emergency calls. Operators cannot rely too much upon information given them, for callers are often excited.

Must Remain Calm

"They must remain calm in the face of hysterics, abuse and unreasonableness."

In the meantime, with the announcement that the new venereal Rapid Treatment Center at Gallinger Hospital would be open July 12, it has been indicated that a venereal disease panel, similar in operation to the other doctors' panels, may be forthcoming.

It has been known for some time that District authorities on social hygiene favor such a measure as an emergency incidental to the war effort.

The matter, however, has not yet gone beyond the "discussion" stage.

Heading the Rapid Treatment Center, which was assured a month ago when District Commissioners were presented a check for operational expenses amounting to $76,612 by the Federal Works Agency, is Dr. John B. Fouts, who reported to Washington, June 24, for duty.

A second 50-bed addition to the Rapid Treatment Center is expected to be under construction shortly.

Martinique Envoy Named by French

tee expects that the talks will be successful.

Hoppenot's delegation will include Jacques Plonton, former head of the Fighting French mission at Accra; Col. Pierre Dechevigne, head of the Fighting French mission in Washington, and Comdr. Pierre Weitzel, former chief of the Fighting French merchant marine.

Jacomy formerly commanded the French forces in China and was later stationed in Indo-China and went to the United States many times with purchasing commissions.

The French spokesman here said there was no confirmation as yet that Martinique has already joined the empire.

The French commissariat of information announced today that a deputy severe of Martinique had sent a message asserting that the island had "rallied enthusiastically to the French Committee of National Liberation and demanded the immediate designation of new authorities."

2 Proposed Envoys Favored by Group

The Senate Foreign Relations Committee approved yesterday President Roosevelt's nominations of Loy Henderson of Colorado to be Minister to Uruguay and Ray Atherton of Illinois to be Minister to the exiled governmens of Denmark and Luxembourg.

they intended to continue their demonstrations unless the leaders were freed.

A disagreement between Admiral Georges Robert, Vichy high commissioner of Martinique, and the colonel commanding the island's garrison favored the demonstrations, the report added, because Robert refused to allow the soldiers to put down the uprising.

One youthful demonstrator was reported to have shouted "Mort au Boche" (Death to the Boche) which resulted in his arrest, but he was released two hours later. The director of the postoffice and telegraph service was said to have incensed the crowd by pulling down the French tricolor flying at half mast over the postoffice as a symbol of mourning, and stamping on it.

Giraud's Daughter Taken to Berlin

Giraud Here; Pays Visit To President

from his command in Martinique and Guadeloupe.

One of Gen. Giraud's chief aims in accepting President Roosevelt's invitation to visit Washington is to get equipment for the French army in North Africa. That army's potential strength has been variously estimated at anywhere from 300,000 to 400,000 men. However, only about a third of it has modern equipment.

In his speeches in Algiers, Gen. Giraud has promised that this French army, once it is fully equipped, will expect to play a major role in the invasion of Europe and the liberation of France.

General Giraud is the highest-ranking French officer to visit Washington since old Marshal Petain came here back in the 1930's to take part in the Yorktown celebration.

Military Atmosphere

General Giraud's arrival, as the White House had been emphasizing for days, was in an atmosphere that was strictly military. There was not a single civilian officer of the United States at Bolling Field to meet him. The American high command, however, was out in force to honor the Frenchman.

General Giraud stepped down from his plane, a huge U. S. Army cargo ship, at 2:30 p. m. and was greeted by Brig. Gen. Louis Fortier, who had been designated as his aide.

The commander in chief of the French Forces in North and West Africa would appear to be something over 6 feet in height. His mustache, which he shaved off when he escaped from a German prison fortress in April, 1942, has grown out, and is now almost of the handlebar variety. A striking feature of the general is his eyes; these are dark, alert and serious.

Military Turnout

The first man to get his salute in the reception committee was Admiral William D. Leahy, the President's personal chief of staff. Next was Gen. George C. Marshall, Army Chief of Staff; Admiral Ernest J. King, commander in chief of the United States Fleet, and Gen. H. H:. Arnold, commanding general of the Army Air Forces. These are all four-star officers.

It was noticed that when General Giraud came to officers of lesser rank, he waited until they had begun to salute before he raised his own hand.

The others were Lieut. Gen. Joseph McNarney, deputy chief of staff; Lieut. Gen. Lesley J. McNair, commanding general of the Army Ground Forces; Lieut. Gen. Brehon Somervel, commanding general of the Army Service Forces; Vice Admiral F. J. Horbe, vice chief of naval operations, and Lieut. Gen. Thomas Holcomb, commandant of the Marine Corps.

From the moment General Giraud stepped from his plane, a 75-mm. gun had been banging away with a 17-gun salute in his honor. After he had met the reception committee, which also included his own and General de Gaulle's representatives in Washington, he wheeled and faced an honor guard lined up before a hangar.

As General Giraud raised his hand in the French salute, with palm outward, the band played "The Marseillaise" and "The Star-Spangled Banner."

General Giraud then got into a limousine with Admiral Leahy and General Marshall, and drove to Blair House, which will be his official residence while in Washington. It is expected that the general will hold a press conference, but the time and place have not yet been announced.

The members of Gen. Giraud's personal party who flew with him from Africa are Lieut. Col. Leon E. Dostert, A. U. S., and the general's aides de camp, Maj. Andre Beaufre, French Army; Lieut. Georges Viret, French Navy, and Maj. Andre Poniatowiski, French Army.

The three French officers were with Gen. Giraud when he escaped from France on November 6, 1942, in an Allied submarine, two days before the landing of the Allied troops in French North Africa. They have served with him ever since.

War Goods Lag Laid to Plant Changes

cutbacks in some production lines presage a general slackening off in the total program, Wilson pointed out that 50 per cent more goods must be produced in the second half of the year than in the first half of the year.

The comparatively poor production showing in May was revealed Tuesday in Nelson's monthly production report. Nelson held the press conference at the request of reporters to explain the results.

"There have been a lot of war-brought changes," Nelson said. "There will be a lot more. I would like to point out, however, that the steady programs like aircraft and naval ships went up.

"Manpower is becoming increasingly a problem in some plants—new workers who must be trained.

"The flood also was a problem—workers had to leave their jobs to protect plants in a wide area. But there were no materials shortages of any consequence in May or June."

Wilson revealed that the Nation is expected to reach an "ultimate maximum" production capacity of more than 10,000 aircraft a month during 1944.

It is understood that this country will be producing more than 9000 planes a month by the end of the year if present schedules are met.

Surveying the job ahead, Nelson said, "If there is any overconfidence—any postwar planning, we will have to get it out of here."

In his staff memorandum, Nelson said:

"Although the distant goal of final victory is now visible, no one can say how long it will take to reach that goal. The road ahead is rough and treacherous. This is no time to relax. Rather it is a time to put everything we have into another burst of productive energy that will carry us through to the day of unconditional surrender by the enemy. We have a job to do and it is not yet finished.

"In my judgement, the men and women who are producing America's tools of war have it in their power to shorten the war by months . . .

"It is just as important today as it was a year ago that personal ambitions and desires be subordinated to the common cause. Both as an organization and as individuals, we of the War Production Board must recognize our high responsibility to help keep the wheels of production turning at full speed as long as necessary . . .

"Let's finish the job."

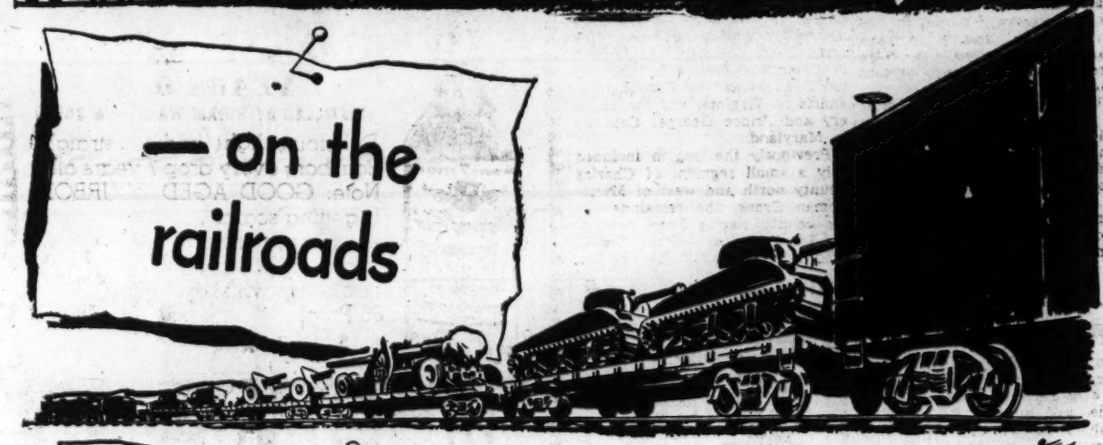
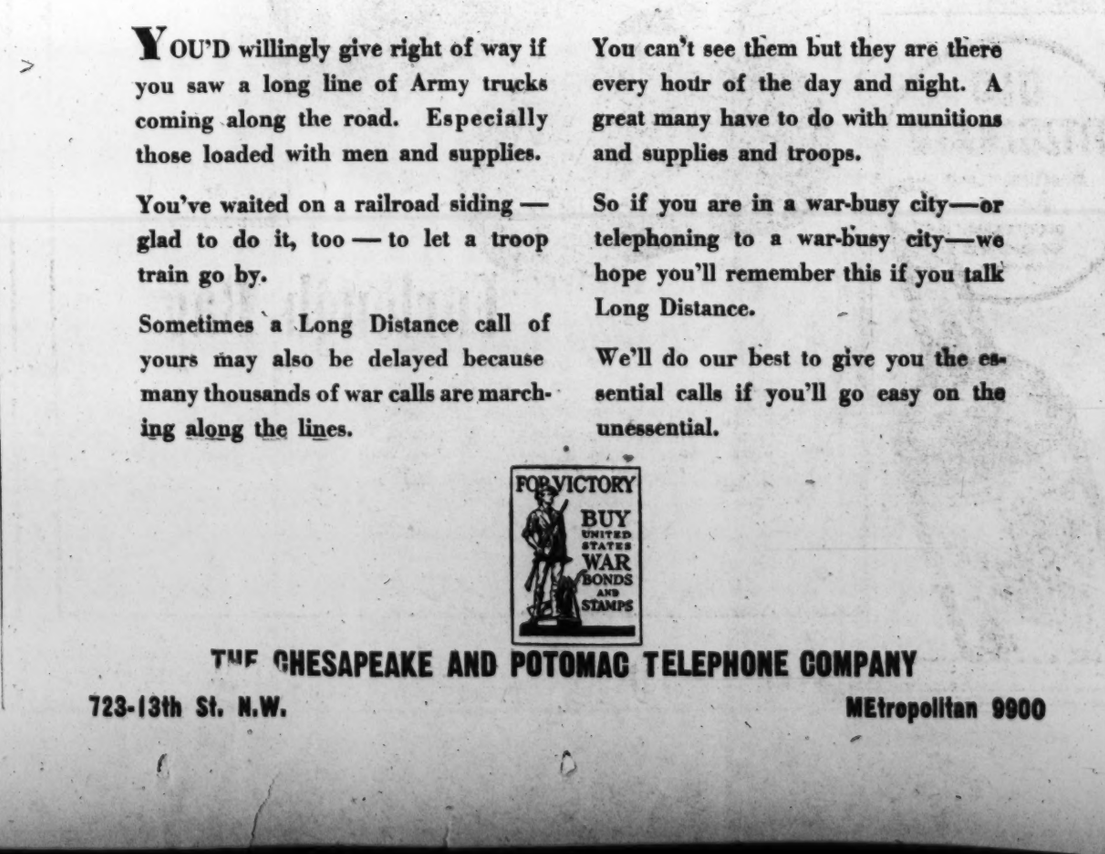
War is on the highways



—on the railroads

—on the telephone wires, too



YOU'D willingly give right of way if you saw a long line of Army trucks coming along the road. Especially those loaded with men and supplies.

You've waited on a railroad siding — glad to do it, too — to let a troop train go by.

Sometimes a Long Distance call of yours may also be delayed because many thousands of war calls are marching along the lines.

You can't see them but they are there every hour of the day and night. A great many have to do with munitions and supplies and troops.

So if you are in a war-busy city—or telephoning to a war-busy city—we hope you'll remember this if you talk Long Distance.

We'll do our best to give you the essential calls if you'll go easy on the unessential.

Rail Walkout Threatens Big Copper Mines

By the Associated Press

Bingham Canyon, Utah, July 7. A walkout of 100 railroad men threatened today to shut down completely operations of the Utah Copper Co., which produces a large portion of the Nation's supply of war-vital red metal.

Approximately 6000 men are employed in the company's open-cut mine at Bingham Canyon, largest in the world, and its mills at Arthur and Magna.

The dispute centered on the question of retirement benefits for members of the Order of Railway Conductors (A. F. L.). A union spokesman said these were in jeopardy; the company denied the claim.

The men walked out over demands that the company recognize they are employes of the Bingham & Garfield Railroad, not the copper company.

D. D. Moffatt, company president and general manager, said processing of ore at the Magna and Arthur mills has ceased with the stoppage of ore shipments from the open mine at Bingham. Fires in the huge Mallett engines, which haul ore on six round trips daily between mine and mills, were cooling today for the first time since depression days.

Providence, R. I., July 7 (AP).—The Providence Typographical Union voted tonight to return to work at the Providence Journal and Bulletin after a one-day strike.

The vote was tawen after the Regional War Labor Board ordered the men to "cease their striking activities and return to work immediately."

The walkout this morning in a contract dispute caused suspension of the Evening Bulletin for the first time in 80 years and the vote to return avoided interruption of the daily issue of the morning paper, the Journal, which would have broken a record of 114 years of daily publication.

The compositors returned to work immediately to prepare Thursday morning's Journal.

The regional War Labor Board issued the order for the men to return at Boston late today, declaring the strike was "in violation of Presidential executive orders and in violation of the national policy of the United States Government that there shall be no strikes for the duration of the war."

Molders Still on Strike

Bridgeport, Conn., July 7 (AP).—A strike of 60 molders at the Aluminum Co. of America continued today, with union officials blaming lack of protection facilities for the work stoppage, and a company spokesman contending that wage increases and bonuses also were an issue.

The moulders quit Saturday after two workers were injured in the explosion of a mold, and notified the management they would not return until their demands for the installation of protective devices were met.

The dispute has resulted in the almost complete stoppage of work at the plant.

Dr. Najera Decorates Gen. Joyce in Salt Lake

Salt Lake City, July 7 (AP).—Terming the decoration a "bond of confraternity between the armies and peoples of the sister republics, Mexico and the United States," Dr. Francisco Castillo Najera, Mexican Ambassador to this country, today bestowed the Order of Azec Eagle on Maj. Gen. Kenyon A. Joyce, commanding general, Ninth Service Command, at Fort Douglas.

In presenting the award, Dr. Najera cited General Joyce "for the military posts that so meritoriously he has discharged on the border line." General Joyce commanded a cavalry unit on the Mexican Border from 1936 to 1940.

New Trial Argument for Kelly Set for July 14

John E. Kelly, 49, of New York and San Francisco, who was convicted last month of failing to register as an agent of the Franco Spanish government, is scheduled to appear before Justice James W. Morris of District Court on July 14 when his attorneys are to argue for a new trial.

Kelly, who has not yet been sentenced, is now being held under $2500 bond.

September Call For Md. Fathers Seen Possible

Baltimore, July 7 (AP).—The drafting of Maryland fathers may begin in September because State quotas for August probably will exhaust the supply of other available registrants, Col. Henry C. Stanwood, State Selective Service director, said today.

The director said local draft boards were calling as many childless registrants as possible by making stricter occupational deferment rulings but "it looks as though we may have to take some fathers to fill our September quota."

Colonel Stanwood emphasized that no fathers would be inducted until national draft headquarters issue formal orders to do so.

Charles County Placed In Capital Defense Area

Expansion of the Washington region of the Office of Civilian Defense to include all of Charles County, Md., was announced yesterday by James M. Landis, director of civilian defense. The region also includes the District of Columbia, Fairfax and Arlington Counties and the City of Alexandria in Virginia, and Montgomery and Prince Georges Counties in Maryland.

Previously the region included only a small segment of Charles County north and west of Mattawoman Creek, the remainder of the county having been part of the Third Civilian Defense Region with headquarters in Baltimore.

Mgr. Haas Blames Bad Housing For Recent Detroit Race Riots

By the Associated Press

Monsignor Francis J. Haas, chairman of the Government's Fair Employment Practice Committee, expressed the opinion yesterday that "inadequate housing, recreation and public transportation" were responsible for the recent fatal race riots in Detroit.

The Catholic priest, back from a three-day trip to the Michigan city, said he had found no evidence that the Ku Klux Klan or the Axis powers had inspired the outbreak, in which more than 25 persons were killed and several hundred injured.

Addressing a press conference, he expressed belief that "a recurrence can be prevented if the causes are removed."

Observing that Detroit's mighty war production plants had brought 35,000 people into that city since the first of the year, he voiced the opinion in response to questions that similar movements of population into other cities might foment similar troubles in them.

Haas said, however, that the FEPC "has no jurisdiction over bad feeling between Negroes and whites," and is authorized only to prevent discrimination in employment because of "race, creed, color or national origin."

He said five of eight unspecified Detroit concerns accused of discriminating in hiring practices had "made adjustments satisfactory to the committee," and that negotiations are being conducted with the other three.

Although it has no intention of making any general public statement to that effect, the Federal Bureau of Investigation takes the view that there has been no direct connection between enemy agents and recent race riots, in this country.

That was the assertion yesterday of D. C. Speaker, mythical Capital observer who represents authentic but unquotable sources.

"Because such riots obviously made good Axis propaganda," Speaker said, "The FBI naturally watched for any sign of enemy activity—but it found little or none."

On the contrary, he said, in some instances the G-men learned that varied forces which were at least partly to blame for the start of the riots had deliberately fostered the idea of enemy activity—to take the finger of suspicion off themselves.

Subsidies Deadlock Conferees

subsidy issue to the people as his last weapon against a price-wage inflation spiral.

Several compromise plans, meantime, were tossed into the conference pot, apparently without hope of survival. One, along lines of the Taft amendment narrowly rejected by the Senate, would impose a ceiling on all subsidies, whether for price cuts or increasing production. Proponents of this plan contended that only thus could Congress avoid indorsing the rollback principle, implied by the Taft amendment.

Another so-called compromise considered by the conferees would incorporate in the CCC extension bill a congressional policy declaration against rollbacks, interpreting the Price Act as barring subsidies for the purpose. The big kink in this solution was that the President might be legally bound by the declaration if he signed the bill, so might veto this also.

The conference predicament was thickened by the fact that Senate conferees, mostly favorable to the President's position, were in the technical position of defending the Senate bill killing the rollback. House conferees, mostly opposed to subsidies, were supposed to support the House bill, leaving the President's hands free. In this comic oper dilemma conferees spent most of yesterday sparring and answering quorum calls in the two Houses.

As the fight entered another day, with the outcome a tossup, adjournment pressure bespoke an early break in the deadlock. Members fidgeted to start their two-month recess. Some key conference managers believed that if the Administration could give assurances it would not extend the rollback beyond butter and meat, Congress would agree to let the whole dreary matter go over until it returns in the fall.

Commander Coll, Plane Crash Victim Is Commended

Lieut. Comdr. John O. R. Coll, U. S. N., who was killed in a plane crash last January near Boonville, Calif., has been commended posthumously for meritorious service as gunnery and torpedo officer of the submarine force, The Navy announced yesterday.

COLL

Commander Coll, a former resident of Washington, married Margaret Canaga, daughter of Capt. Bruce L. Canaga, U. S. N. (retired), director of Naval Training with headquarters in Washington. She, with her son, John Patrick Coll, lives at 806 Hillwood Avenue, Falls Church, Va.

A native of Jeffersonville, Ind., Commander Coll graduated from the Naval Academy in 1927 and served aboard the U. S. S. Memphis, Simpson, and Pittsburgh and the submarines S-11, S-28, S-26 and Sculpin. He also served in the office of the Chief of Naval Operations in Washington and as flying gunnery observer with the Submarine Scouting Force.

This was the first time that Kiska had been bombarded by naval vessels since last August, when an attack on the enemy-held island was coordinated with the American invasion of the Guadalcanal-Tulagi area of the southeastern Solomons.

Heavily Attacked by Air

In the intervening months Kiska has been heavily attacked by air but recently bad weather has reduced the number of raids possible in one day and on some days has shut out air operations entirely. On July 2 the island was raided eight times and on July 3, the last aerial foray reported, bad weather cut the raids to only one.

Fog and darkness, however, are no insuperable obstacle to combardment by naval vessels and shelling would serve the same purpose as aerial bombings in softening up Kiska's defenses preliminary to any invasion attempt.

Chesney Confirmed As WMC Consultant

Elk Hills Contract Defended by Navy

Declares in Report to Committee Standard Would Have Lost Millions

The Navy, denying its contract with the Standard Oil of California granted the company a monopoly of the Elk Hills petroleum reserve, yesterday declared the transaction, now rescinded, would have conserved oil for the Government.

In a statement to the House Public Lands Committee, the Navy said its officials believed oil conservation laws of 1920 and 1938 had authorized the contract, whose legal provisions have been declared by Assistant Attorney General Norman M. Littell and Comptroller General Lindsay Warren to go "beyond" provisions of Teapot Dome contracts in the Harding Administration.

The department said that under the contract, Standard would give up "millions of dollars of profit" that it would otherwise make from its own property there.

Contention by Navy

Contending the transaction limited production from the reserve to 27,500,000 barrels during a five-year period, the Navy estimated Standard would have drilled approximately 62,500,000 barrels of oil from its land alone during this period—double the amount allowed under the contract—if no limitation were placed.

Of this, it continued, between 12 million and 15 million barrels would have been drained from Navy's lands during the period.

"Since Standard agrees to limit the production during such period to 27,500,000 barrels, and to produce after such period only enough to cover its costs, the conclusion is inescapable that Standard by entering into this contract with Navy is giving up millions of dollars of profit that it would otherwise make in the operation of its own properties," the statement said.

Statement Challenged

The Navy said the contract prevented drainage from its lands and conserved the oil in the ground, and termed "misleading" Littell's statement that the contract terms allowing Standard to withdraw 27,500,000 barrels of oil during five years amounted to advancing the company more than 12 million dollars.

"If the Navy should follow the recommendation set out in the Assistant Attorney General's memorandum that the Navy proceed to condemn this property," it continued, "the loss of interest on the cash paid for the property in condemnation proceedings would be many times greater than the loss on Navy's share of the net production during the five-year period."

Declaring Standard had assumed obligations under the contract which might be "very burdensome to Standard," the statement said, the effect of the contract was to reserve the field to meet an emergency.

Trailer Tax Hearing Is Scheduled July 21

Annapolis, Md., July 7 (AP).—Court consideration of a challenge to the constitutionality of a county trailer tax law will begin July 21 at 9:30 a. m. in the Anne Arundel County Circuit Court, Judge Ridgely P. Melvin, chief judge of the Fifth Judical Circuit announced today.

James Matthew English, resident of a trailer at Rock Creek, had entered a bill of complaint, charging that a county tax measure which was enacted during the 1943 session of the General Assembly, was invalid and unconstitutional."

Named in the bill of complaint were the county commissioners, the county building inspector and the Circuit Court clerk. This group filed a reply to the complaint, asking dismissal of the order restraining enforcement of the tax law, on the ground that it was both "constitutional and valid."

Bone Assails Anaconda Wire Case Fines; Says Soldier Would Be Shot for Crime

By the Associated Press

Sentences imposed on Anaconda Wire and Cable Co. officials after they declined to contest charges of conspiracy to furnish the Government with defective wire, were criticized in the Senate yesterday by Senator Bone (Democrat) of Washington.

A Federal judge at Fort Wayne, Ind., suspended prison terms after imposing on three officials these sentences: $10,000 fine and two years imprisonment, $10,000 fine and 18 months, and $500 and one year. Two others were fined, one $500 and the other $100.

Assails Greedy Men

"The defendants in this case were gentle souls and made defective war material for the purpose of making money. If the greed of men goes to such length that they are willing to endanger the lives of soldiers to enrich themselves, they will find that some day, when this terrible war comes to an end, the people of America will write an iconoclastic thesis against such iniquities in a fierce whirlwind of retribution."

The Senator said the judge held that sending the officials to jail would not be "much of a deterrent to others."

"If all courts adopted this theory of administering the law," Bone asserted, "it would bring undiluted joy to the hearts of prospective criminals who could escape imprisonment by paying a small fine."

Some "small fry" accused of interferring with the war effort have been sent to prison, Bone stated.

Waynesboro Marine Is Injured Fatally

Special Dispatch to The Post

Waynesboro, Va., July 7.—Sergt. Clyde Finter Thompson of Waynesboro, 29-year-old Marine Corps drill instructor, was fatally injured near Long Branch, Calif., over the weekend, according to a telegram received by his mother, Mrs. N. O. Thompson, of near Waynesboro.

Sergeant Thompson was one of the first Augusta County boys to enter service following news of the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor. He and his brother enlisted in the Marine Corps on Monday, December 8, 1941.

Funeral and burial will take place at Lyndhurst Methodist Church following arrival of the body here from the West Coast.

Senate Votes 33-Cent Price Boost to Free Stored Corn

off the brakes."

Dodd argued the corn supply is so low only a few speculators would benefit if the price went up.

Meantime, the War Food Administration and the Office of Price Administration were awaiting a policy decision from "higher up" before announcing their plans for a solution of the corn-hog-livestock bottleneck.

Observers doubted the House would approve the Senate legislation, which would certainly receive a presidential veto, but it was agreed the Administration would have to act soon.

The WFA, it was believed, will withdraw the Government support price of $13.75 per hundred pounds from hogs weighing above 250 pounds—in an effort to drain "big eaters" from the farms and discourage the continued expansion of pig production.

This support price, which helped force hog prices down from more than $16 per hundredweight, has been promised until September, 1944.

The OPA corn ceiling of $1.07 at Chicago is set until October of this year and covers all the 1942 crop. It was clamped on hurriedly by OPA in early February when the Bankhead bill was before Congress and many Congressmen argued at the time it was too low. It was set on a sliding scale that permitted a 1-cent increase per month until the $1.07 top.

The first official act of Chester C. Davis as War Food Administrator was to get OPA to permit the price to go to $1.07 immediately and to put the price support under hogs.

Approximately 800 million bushels of corn are on the Nation's farms, according to Agriculture estimates, although in early spring the number of bushels was above two billions.

In a recent move requisitioning all corn held in commercial elevators, the WFA shook loose only around three million bushels not already slated for essential deliveries. Corn industrial plants have a supply that probably will last them through next week, but not beyond.

Dairy herds and beef cattle can scrape through the summer on pastures plus a little feed—if they have to, but dairymen contend the milk supply will be diminished. Poultry raisers are very hard hit by the shortage.

As soon as corn farmers can learn what their 1944 crop will be, they will be more in the mood to turn loose the bushels they do not currently need. If their yield is down, the promise of $1.40 is not expected to have much effect on them.

Final Action Due on Fund Bills

1943, unless such person shall have been appointed by the President by and with the advice and consent of the Senate; Provided that those appointed between June 30, 1943, and November 1, 1943, may hold office till the latter date unless sooner than that the Senate shall have refused to give its advice and consent as to any such appointee."

The House missed by six votes an opportunity to accept Taber's plan yesterday. The vote was 176 to 170. If accepted today, the compromise would result in sending to the White House the 3 billion dollar war agencies bill and the one billion dollar labor Federal security bill.

Flood Fund Proposal

Passage of the third bill, carrying more than 300 million dollars in assorted deficiency funds, hinged on House and Senate agreement on half a dozen controversial items, including the embattled issue of crop insurance.

With the House adamant against voting more than a liquidation fund for crop insurance, the Senate appropriations leaders last night backed down, agreeing to recommend that the Senate remove a four-million-dollar insurance item from the bill. The Senate group also agreed to drop out of the bill an eight-million-dollar item for finishing 28 civilian airports, after the House had beaten down a proposal to restore the funds.

In return, the House group agreed to seek restoration of 15 million dollars for emergency food production projects in flood-stricken areas, but with use of the money limited to loans, with no grants. The House earlier turned down the proposed fund.

In another compromise, the House and Senate conference agreed to recommend giving private vocational institutions an opportunity to borrow during the war training equipment of the National Youth Administration which Congress has ordered to liquidate. They also agreed to exclude the Lend Lease Administration from the list of Federal agencies which would be able to obtain the equipment.

3 Apse Windows To Be Dedicated

Three central apse windows will be dedicated at services today at 4 p. m. at the Washington Cathedral in mmory of Josephine Wheelright Rust, Harry Lee Rust and Gwynn Wheelright Rust. The Right Rev. Noble C. Powell, Bishop Coadjutor of Maryland and former warden of the Cathedral College of Preachers, will officiate.

The importance of the windows, according to cathedral officials, is they are situated in the center of the apse above the high altar and reredos to complete the focal point of the cathedral in the Nation's Capital. The windows' subject matter relates to the culminating events in Christ's life—His Crucifixion, the Resurrection and Christ in majesty.

ABC Calls Hearing On Credit Issue

Public hearings on the new ABC Board regulation forbidding extension of credit from wholesale to retail liquor dealers will be held at 10 a. m. today in the District Building board room.

The new regulation, which puts all wholesale-retail liquor transactions on a strictly cash basis, was protested by a number of retailers who claimed it was discriminatory and it was ordered without public hearing. It was to go into effect July 19.

WLB Hints No Shipyard Raise

tion of the war on their present wages . . ."

Wages Review

The shipyard wage question came before WLB in connection with an annual wage review required by existing "zone" wage agreements stabilizing wages for the entire industry.

Demands for a wage increase to compensate for the increase in the cost of living during the past year were made at the hearing by John P. Frey, president of the A. F. of L. Metal Trades Department, and John Green, president of the C. I. O. Marine and Shipbuilding Workers, C. I. O.

Frey phrased no exact demand, however. Green asked for a 9 per cent boost on the basis of his contention that the cost of living has increased 18 per cent during the year—cut in half on the basis of a union offer to "split the difference."

Bureau Questioned

Both Frey and Green contended that the Bureau of Labor Statistics failed to measure accurately the rise in the cost of living. They pointed out that shipyard workers received an 8-cents-an-hour increase a year ago instead of 13 cents called for by contract, at the request of President Roosevelt in return for his promise to hold the cost of living down. Frey said the wage review raised the question of the "integrity" of the Government's promise.

Among the highest paid workers in the country, the ship workers would not be entitled to any adjustment under WLB's "Little Steel" formula.

H. Gerrish Smith, president of the Shipbuilding Council of America, representing employers, contended that "any increase in shipyard and ship repairing wages at this time is unjustified and is a clear and unmistakable violation of the 'hold the line' policy."

Smith said average straight time hourly rates in shipbuilding are $1.14 per hour, or 32 per cent above the average for all manufacturing and 21 per cent above the average for all durable goods. He said average weekly earnings were $58.46, or 40 per cent above all manufacturing and 32 per cent above durable goods averages.

Ask Reclassification

The unions also asked for wage reclassifications of middle and lower bracket jobs. It was regarded as possible that WLB would order such a reclassification without granting a general wage increase.

Relatively high minimum shipbuilding rates—95 cents an hour for common labor in some West Coast yards—seemed to preclude any adjustment to shipyard lower brackets on grounds of substandard wage conditions.

Frey said, "We ask only that in reaching your final decision, labor's real wages in relation to the cost of living are going to be maintained."

Failure to give such a guarantee, he said, would give labor reason to doubt the "process of self-regulation established for the period of the war."

Donald Nelson on Air

Donald Nelson, director of the War Production Board, will be heaKrd over Radio Station WMAL today between 1:15 and 1:45 from Toronto, Canada, where he will address the Canadian Club on an international topic.

LADY, we're just as sorry as we can be. Now, as always, we would do anything in our power to make your train trip comfortable.

Now, as always, we'd like to provide a seat for everybody—but war comes first.

The R. F. & P. RAILROAD today carries 80% more passengers than last year, and nearly 5 times the traffic carried in 1940 just before the war.

Furlough travel at times is so heavy that we find it necessary to discontinue the sale of tickets for some trains. Often even standing room is not available.

Every patriotic American is urged to be SURE his trip is necessary before he buys a ticket. Please do not make non-essential trips, but if you MUST go, travel if possible on Tuesday, Wednesday, or Thursday; limit your hand-baggage to actual requirements, other baggage can be checked; and if your plans are changed, cancel your reservations promptly.

This railroad, like all railroads, wants you to enjoy Travel by Train. But, as every patriotic American knows, war comes first in wartime.

Iceland Prelate Consecrated Titular Bishop

By Robert Tate Allan
Post Church Editor

Kneeling at the altar of St. Patrick's Catholic Church yesterday, the Most Rev. Johannes Gunnarsson heard the ancient words "Accipe spiritum sanctum" and felt priestly hands upon his head, as he became Titular Bishop of Holar and Vicar-Apostolic of Iceland.

First native Icelander elevated to the episcopacy in 400 years, he was consecrated with age-old Roman Catholic ceremony before members of the Catholic hierarchy, several religious orders, Icelandic diplomats and almost 1000 other worshipers.

Among the diplomatic representatives were the Icelandic Minister and Mrs. Thor Thors, the First Secretary and Mrs. Henrick Sv. Bjornsson, Thorhallur Asgeirsson, attache; Helgi P. Briem, Icelandic consul in New York City, and Stefan Einersson, Icelandic consul in Baltimore.

The Most Rev. Amleto Giovanni Cicognani, Apostolic Delegate to the United States, resplendent in his glittering miter and bright vestments, was consecrating prelate and celebrant of the pontifical solemn high mass.

As the consecration reached its climax, the Apostolic Delegate, with the aid of his assistants, laid the open Gospels upon the neck and shoulders of the bishop-elect, the printed word touching the neck and the chaplains kneeling behind and supporting the book. Then came the imposition of the hands and prayers, the essential rite by which the episcopal power is conferred, or the rite of apostolic succession.

Rites Carried Out

A few minutes later, Archbishop Cicognani placed a bishop's ring upon the ring finger of the new bishop's right hand, put a crozier (staff) in his hand, and a mitre upon his head.

The crozier in his left hand, the new prelate walked down the church aisle to bless the throng. He was accompanied by the Most Rev. John M. McNamara, auxiliary bishop of Baltimore and Washington; the Most Rev. Peter L. Ireton, coadjutor bishop of Richmond, and the Rev. Walter J. Schmitz, S.S., of Suplician Seminary, Catholic University, the last-named master of ceremonies.

Midway in the service the Very Rev. Msgr. Lawrence J. Shehan, St. Patrick's rector, ascended the high pulpit to read a decree from the Apostolic Delegation here authorizing the ceremony in absence of the official Papal Bull from Rome. The papers were believed to have been lost on a ship at sea.

The Most Rev. John F. O'Hara, military delegate of the Catholic Army and Navy Diocese, delivered the sermon. Another prelate present was Bishop Edmund J. Fitz-Maurice of Wilmington, Del.

D. C. Officer Cited for Service

For "exceptionally meritorious service . . . (which) contributed in a large measure to the saving of a large percentage of casualties," Col. Austin J. Canning, Army Medical Corps, was awarded the Legion of Merit, the War Department announced yesterday in making public the names of 33 American soldiers in the Hawaiian Department who have received the award.

Colonel Canning, whose home address is given as 1317 Dogwood Street Northwest, is now stationed at Army General Hospital, Utica, N. Y.

Colonel Canning, commanding officer of Station Hospital, Schofield Barracks, was born in Pennsylvania June 5, 1887. He received his M.D. from the University of Pennsylvania in 1911 and entered the Medical Corps in May, 1914.

The award of the Legion of Merit to Maj. Irvin J. Katz, whose wife lives at 7416 Georgia Avenue Northwest, was reported in The Post June 25. His name was also on yesterday's War Department list.

Three Virginia men were awarded the Legion of Merit, among them Brig. Gen. William R. White of Portsmouth for "exceptionally meritorious service and extraordinary fidelity in the performance of outstanding service as director of food control on the staff of the military governor."

Capt. Bernard M. Wootton of Richmond and Sergt. Henry L. Hendricks of Lynchburg also received the Legion of Merit.

Trio of Pickets Released on Bond And a Promise

Two youthful Pennsylvanians who announced they were "tentatively engaged" to be married and a 22-year-old Washington girl were released from District Jail yesterday on their personal bond and a promise that should they again decide they wanted to picket the British Embassy they would inform the judge of their intentions first.

Members of the "tentatively engaged" couple are Lillian J. Fulton, 26, of Wilkinsburg, Pa., and Harold H. Lefever, 26, of Spring Grove, Pa. The Washingtonian is Marjorie Kendrick of 1825 Lamont Street Northwest.

The purpose, according to Lefever, was to "get England out of disrepute." The coordination, he said, came from the Free India Committee of New York City.

Judges Nathan Margold of Municipal Court found the pickets guilty on Tuesday and told them that if they would promise not to repeat their picketing they could go free.

Rails' Income In May Mounts To 85 Million

The Nation's railroads had an estimated net income of $85,100,000 during May compared with $63,668,283 in the same month last year, the Association of American Railroads reported yesterday.

May operating revenues amounted to $759,330,727 an increase of 158 million dollars over the 1942 month, while operating expenses totaled $454,361,704, an increase of 79 million dollars.

Net income for the first five months of the year was $377,600,000, an increase of 166 million dollars over the corresponding period last year.

Court Postpones Childs Co. Case

New York, July 7 (AP).—Counsel for the Childs Co., operator of a chain of restaurants, told Federal Bankruptcy Referee Robert P. Stephenson today that company officials were making progress with an undisclosed plan which, if successfully completed, might obviate the necessity of determining the question of solvency of the company.

The counsel, Col. Hamilton C. Rickaby, said that the company was solvent on the basis of its last financial report and he obtained from the referee adjournment until next Monday of a pretrial conference of creditors.

China Lauded For Gallant 6-Year Stand

The sixth anniversary of China's gallant stand against the Japanese aggressor yesterday drew praise from President Roosevelt and from religious and legislative figures.

The Chief Executive sent "hearty greetings" by radio to the Chinese people; the Right Rev. Msgr. G. Barry O'Toole, former rector of the Fu-Jen Catholic University of Peiping, lauded Chinese patriotism at a solemn pontifical mass, and Minnesota Representative Walter Judd, former medical missionary to China, spoke at a mass meeting of the local Chinese colony last night.

Roosevelt's message, read for him in a transmission from San Francisco to Chungking, was followed by excerpts from former addresses by Roosevelt in his own voice.

Promises Always Kept

"Our friends have long known what our enemies are learning today," the message declared, "that the promises of the United States are always kept and our pledges are always redeemed.

"The statements which follow have been made by me at various times since we joined hands with you in this war. It is good to know that the hopes and the promises I expressed on these former occasions are all being borne out today.

"I send you, the people of China, the heartfelt greetings of your partners, the people of the United States."

There followed these reproductions of past addresses by the President:

". . . We are fighting on the same side as the brave people of China, those millions who for . . . years have withstood bombs and starvation and have whipped the invaders time and again in spite of the superior Japanese equipment and arms . . .

Is Still the Capital

"Chungking has been almost wiped out of existence—yet it remains the capital of an unbeatable China. That is the conquering spirit which prevails throughout the United Nations in this war. . . .

"No matter what advances the Japanese may make, ways will be found to deliver airplanes and munitions of war to the armies of Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek. . . .

"The common needs of all humanity are joining the culture of Asia with the culture of Europe and the culture of the Americas to form, for the first time, a real world civilization."

Mass Celebrated

His excellency, Bishop Paul Yu-Pin, Vicar Apostolic of Nanking, China, celebrated a solemn pontifical mass at the Shrine of the Sacred Heart, Sixteenth and Park Road Northwest, under the sponsorship of the Chinese Catholic Cultural Association. Delivering the sermon, Monsignor O'Toole, now Catholic University professor, said:

"Among the United Nations, none has entered this war with a cleaner conscience, or with nobler ideals than the Chinese people. Their war with Japan has been purely defensive, forced upon them after they had exhausted every reasonable means of avoiding recourse to arms. As for ideals, can we conceive of nobler ones than those for which the Chinese soldier fights? Against force he upholds reason; against hatred he upholds human brotherhood; against racism he upholds universalism; against despotic stateism he upholds the personal rights and dignity of the human individual.

"Of these lofty ideals, which the Chinese hold in common with all Christian people, every truly democratic nation must approve, and it is because the United Nations stand committed to these principles that our soldier boys are sincere in their patriotism—ready to die in order that their countries may live."

Identity of Ideals

Against a backdrop of United Nations' flags and a framed likeness of Gen. Sun Yat-Sen, founder of the Chinese Republic, Minnesota Representative Walter Judd last night cited an "identity of ideals" that binds America and China together.

Facing members of the local Chinese colony and American friends at Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church, the Congressman—former medical missionary to China—said that while there are superficial differences between us and China, there is a "deep kinship between us in the things that count—in an understanding of what human freedom means."

Congressman Judd got an ovation from the audience, who earlier in the program bowed thrice before Gen. Sun Yat-Sen's picture; sang the Chinese national anthem, and offered three minutes' silent prayer for the Chinese war dead and for all men of the United Nations having died in the global war.

Chinese USO Club to Open Here Saturday

Our Chinese allies will join the United Service Organization Saturday at the Y. M. C. A., Seventeenth and G Streets Northwest, when a clubroom is opened for and by them at 8 p. m.

The new USO is the outgrowth of a Chinese-United States Government employe club which has been meeting for a year and a half—when space could be found—to eat, play bridge, attend concerts and just be generally sociable. The club will welcome Government employes and servicemen and women of the Chinese race every evening until September.

Must Move in September

In September, the room donated by the "Y" becomes a classroom again, and the Chinese USO will have to start looking for a room again.

"We're awfully happy to have the space now, though," Frances Wong said yesterday. "Our group is becoming large for public places and none of us has a home in Washington. We come from all over the United States," she said.

The Chinese clubroom will operate as part of USO at the Y. M. C. A., and those using it as a lounge, meeting place or for bridge or table games will be introduced to the "Y" facilities by the Chinese hostesses who will be in charge.

In honor of the Saturday opening, red, white and blue paper curtains have been made and an embassy-donated Chinese flag is on display.

American Flag Needed

"We do need an American flag," Frances Wong said—when asked if anything were required. "And we could certainly use a punch bowl," she added, although she pointed out that a bucket can always be decorated to serve the purpose.

Clubroom visitors will be able to apply for membership in the Government workers' club if they wish.

Newly elected officers are Dr. Edward Whey Leong, George Washington University professor and only non-Government worker member, of California, president; Mary Lee, War Department, of New Jersey, vice president; Frances Wong, WPB, of Maryland, secretary, and Dorothea Chan, St. Elizabeth's Hospital, of Washington, treasurer.

Long Trek Taken By Scots to Battle

London (Thursday), July 8 (AP).—A great 28-day 2800-mile trek by a battalion of Scots Guards from Syria to the Mareth Line was disclosed belatedly today by the War Office.

The Guards traveled by motor transport with other units and lost only seven or eight of their hundreds of vehicles en route. They arrived in Tunisia in time to play a leading role in the successful Medenine Battle on March 6, the War Office said.

Rotarians Greet New Officers At Luncheon

Albert W. Atwood, newly elected president of the Rotary Club of Washington, yesterday presented the new officers and directors to the weekly luncheon assembly in the Willard Hotel.

The officers are Howard S. LeRoy, vice president; George E. Muth, secretary; W. Spencer Brenizer, treasurer, and Leo C. May, sergeant at arms. Also introduced were four new members of the board of directors: Grant Leet, Daniel Holland, Albert H. Lucas, Thomas J. Groom.

Atwood, former chief editorial writer for the Saturday Evening Post, expressed his pride in leading the club, which has been in existence since July, 1912, and has a record of 1400 meetings.

Nehemias Gueiros, professor of law in Pernambuco, Brazil, presented a flag from Brazil Rotary to the Washington club. More than 500 members and guests were present.

Restaurant Group Confers With OPA On Capital Prices

An advisory committee composed of representatives of restaurant and hotel operators met yesterday with Robert K. Thompson, director, and other officials of the local OPA to continue their current discussions of restaurant prices in Washington.

The OPA, it was announced following the meeting, is attempting to ascertain facts behind restaurant prices, such as increased labor and food costs, before making any decision as to whether or not prices here will be allowed to continue at the present level or rolled back to the level of a previous date.

OPA officials were unable to estimate when the series of meetings would end or when a decision would be made relative to the justification of present prices.

Legislators' Antics

Trained observers are strongly of the opinion that a good many Senators have become so bewildered by the controversy over rollback subsidies that they do not know what they are voting for or why. The result is that a few clear-headed Senators who are opposed to all compromise with advocates of the rollback had a field day on Tuesday. They succeeded in overthrowing the sensible compromise proposal sponsored by Senator Taft and indorsed by the Administration. And they eventually sent to conference a measure that in its present form would invite another presidential veto. However, a veto would also kill the bill prolonging the life of the Commodity Credit Corporation. And the Senate certainly does not wish to dispense with that agency, though at one stage of Tuesday's proceedings it inadvertently doomed the CCC by rejecting the bill to continue its existence after the offending subsidy provisions had been removed. That error was subsequently repaired, but the incident demonstrates the befuddlement of Senators who participated in the debate.

The conferees from House and Senate are now trying to find a formula for extending the life of the CCC that will be acceptable to the President and Congress alike. It is perfectly obvious, however, that the subsidy controversy cannot be settled either by ignoring it or by refusing to take cognizance of the President's attitude. The situation is one that clearly calls for a compromise of opposing viewpoints. If Congress had gone on record earlier in defining its attitude toward consumer subsidies of the rollback type, it would have had a valid excuse for standing pat now. But its present position is vulnerable to attack because it has passed legislation that gives color of legality to rollback subsidies, and has failed to lay down general policies for the guidance of subsidizing agencies, as it should have done. Faced by the consequences of its own sins of omission and commission, Congress ought to make some concessions to the Administration as a means of averting a possible deadlock of a highly injurious nature.

Rebuilding Cities

Rebuilding of American cities will be one of the unavoidable tasks to which we must devote a considerable part of our energy in the postwar era. In the past our cities grew almost without planning, and even now planning is often superficial, piecemeal or otherwise inadequate. Decay has been allowed to encroach upon both business and residential districts without effective resistance. That decay is known to be a contributing factor to crime, delinquency, disease, and poverty. Yet most cities have chosen to build new suburbs on their outskirts while blighted areas close to their business districts go from bad to worse.

Here is a colossal problem for the planners and builders of tomorrow. Indeed, it is a problem too big for most cities to undertake while relying wholly upon their own initiative and resources. Assistance in planning and financing may well come from the Federal Government. In the prewar years the Government provided expert assistance, loans and grants for slum clearance and housing projects with generally favorable results. Extension of its interest and financial aid to city planning and redevelopment on a wider scale would afford a logical projection of this policy into the postwar period.

The problem has been laid before Congress in a bill introduced by Senator Wagner at the request of the Urban Land Institute. The bill would authorize loans to cities up to a total of one billion dollars through the National Housing Agency. Such a loan could be obtained by a city only after approval of a comprehensive development plan to make certain that the money would be wisely spent. The fund could then be used to buy up land in blighted areas for redevelopment in accord with the master city plan. Once taken over for reclamation under the powers of eminent domain, the land could be resold for development by private enterprise or turned over to an appropriate agency for public use.

Safeguards against any private buyer holding the land for speculative purposes are provided. Care would also have to be exercised to prevent the purchase of land at exorbitant prices out of all relation to current value. Tighter provisions than the bill provides would doubtless be needed to insure development of the reclaimed areas in full accord with new city plans. Senator Wagner's reference to the measure as "primarily a private enterprise bill" also raises a big question as to how slum dwellers displaced by redevelopment of the areas in which they live would be rehoused. Private enterprise usually finds it impossible to build decent quarters for the low-income families who predominate in blighted neighborhoods. So if slum districts were devoted to commercial use or privately built apartments or houses, low-rental dwellings would certainly have to be provided elsewhere to avoid intolerable hardships and further crowding of the slums.

No doubt these problems will be carefully analyzed when Congress takes up the bill. The fact that many safeguards are necessary does not make it any less desirable to encourage and assist cities in wiping out the decay of the past and planning for more intelligent use of their land in the future.

Waste Of Time

We are fighting a steadily losing battle against inflation. Except for the three or four billion dollars in additional revenue expected to result from the pay-as-you-go income tax bill, Congress is about to adjourn without doing anything to close the steadily widening gap between consumer income and the amount of goods available for consumer use at current prices. Moreover, the Ways and Means Committee has decided to take the summer off, instead of buckling down and drafting a new tax measure for presentation the moment Congress reassembles. The committee plans to open hearings on a new tax bill September 8. Meantime its own tax experts and those attached to the Treasury are instructed to be ready with suggestions for raising new revenue, and in particular to study the feasibility of introducing individual excess profits taxes.

By this time the tax experts have explored fairly exhaustively most of the practicable plans for raising new revenue. Instructions to keep up the quest are largely a face-saving device destined to provide the Ways and Means Committee with an excuse for dilatoriness. New hearings are a waste of time because the committee knows perfectly well after long months of discussion what kind of tax program is required to win the battle against inflation. Taxes must be designed to reach the great body of wages earners whose incomes have been greatly expanded owing to the war. And they must be applied speedily to prevent the system of price control from progressing from very bad to much worse.

It is especially discouraging to hear that the Ways and Means Committee is giving consideration to so-called individual excess profits taxes as an alternative to a general sales tax. Theoretically taxes levied on increases in the incomes of individuals resulting from the war would reach the people whose expanded purchasing power is the chief source of inflationary buying. Actually the practical as well as purely political objections to such a proposal are insuperable. Representative Robertson, who made the motion to undertake a study of this form of tax, points out, for instance, that some sort of base period from which to measure taxable income increases would be necessary. It would also be necessary, he added, to "protect the fellow who had no income in the base period and also make some provision for normal increases in earnings." Even if these formidable difficulties could be surmounted, one's sense of fair play would be outraged by an income tax system that applied different rates of taxation to men earning the same amount, having the same number of dependents and wanting much the same things. Of all the bright ideas that have been evolved by inventive tax experts, the proposal to apply the principles of the corporate excess profits tax to individuals is one of the most far-fetched and, from the viewpoint of the average man, the most offensively inequitable.

Congressmen who object to a general sales tax on the ground that it would fall most heavily on the masses would have a hard time defending a tax that penalized workers for getting ahead of their fellows by means of wage increases. Such an invidious proposal would be indignantly rejected by any Congressman who valued his reputation and his political future. The only possible benefit to be derived from a study of individual excess profits taxes is that it will focus attention upon the fact that most of the potentially inflationary excess purchasing power in consumer hands is to be found among the lower wage-earning income groups. Those incomes can be reached most effectively and expeditiously by means of general sales taxes and/or compulsory savings.

Kiss Of Death

There is always some small wonder to reward a careful reader of the daily press. Our latest source of joy is an article in The Daily Worker, organ of the Communist Party, expressing support of Mayor Frank Hague of Jersey City. There was a time, to be sure, when Frank Hague was commonly called a "home-grown Hitler" and a "political boss" in the least complimentary sense of these terms. For a while, when he refused to let any labor organizers hold meetings in Jersey City, Mayor Hague was considered quite reactionary.

But, according to The Daily Worker, this is now an "outworn conception," and people who perpetuate it are merely playing "into the hands of the defeatists by taking their sham weapon, the nonexistent struggle against so-called Hagueism . . ." Well, well, conceptions certainly do change with the times and, as someone had previously observed, bedfellows sometimes make strange politics, or vice versa.

How Mayor Hague feels about this Communist Party indorsement has not been ascertained. Presumably it is about as useful to him as poison ivy to a paratrooper. It may be, indeed, that the Communists have at last found the one genuinely effective way to crack Boss Hague's domain. This involves a greater degree of subtlety, to be sure, than has ever hitherto been imputed to them. But it contains staggering possibilities for the political future Perhaps the Communist Party, for the first time in its history, will become a potent political force by throwing its support to those whom it has singled out for destruction.

Through astute application of this sort of reverse English, the Commies could virtually control next year's elections. Offhand we can think of several candidates for whom we should be glad to hear them speak a good word—Martin Dies of Texas, for example, or Gene Cox of Georgia. They could work wonders among the coal miners if they would vouch for John L. Lewis. Perhaps the only antidote for such strategy would be for Dies, Cox and Lewis to turn around and indorse the Communists. That would put the party in its place, all right. For all we know, this sort of reciprocal liquidation might usher in the millennium. A pat on the back may be worth a dozen socks in the jaw.

Chiang's Optimism

China's generalissimo, celebrating the beginning of the seventh year of China's heroic struggle against the Japanese invaders, spoke to his people in an optimistic vein very unusual for him. To be sure, Chiang Kai-shek told the Chinese that "the present marks the beginning of our greatest trials," but he also declared that the time for the utter defeat of Japan "cannot exceed two years." These words will be as balm on a bruise to a war-weary people who have borne incredible hardships as the price of resistance.

However, the generalissimo's confident belief in a relatively early victory must not lead the people of the United Nations to assume that this victory will be automatic. Victory can only come if the Allies take advantage of the change in the military tide in the Pacific theater and press on with all their spirit and all their might. As Chiang Kai-shek points out in a special message to the United Nations, the job we have before us is to thwart Japan's "desperate efforts" to regear and replenish her war machine. And he adds the warning: "Should we let her have further respite to complete impregnable defenses and to wage a long-drawn-out war with us, the time and price the Allies will have to pay to defeat her will be many times longer and heavier than what are required today."

It is apparent from his statement as to when he expects Japan to be defeated that the generalissimo is convinced the Allies will not vouchsafe Japan the respite she needs. His belief is supported by President Roosevelt's pledge to the Chinese people that we shall neglect "none of the roads to Tokyo." After six years of a bitter war, which has seen a large part of China's richest and most productive areas fall into the hands of the invaders, and millions of Chinese killed and made homeless, the Chinese have reason to be more confident of the future than ever before.

Mutual Understanding

We have come a long way during the past decade in the improvement of relations between management and labor. Collective bargaining, Federal wage-and-hour standards, social security provisions, all at one time vigorously resisted, have become accepted parts of the pattern of our national economic life. Although occasional strikes still disrupt our production program, it should not be forgotten that they are the exception rather than the rule and that, in the main, employers and employes are learning to work together in unity.

A reminder of this development was offered the other day by Roger D. Lapham when he retired from his post as an industry member of the War Labor Board. Speaking from the viewpoint of an industrialist who had run the gamut of labor relations from "rotten to excellent," Mr. Lapham made this significant observation: "The value of the board's work is that it has brought labor and management to a better understanding of each other's problems. For me this experience has been an educational one, and the same thing goes for others across the other side of the table as well as for the public members."

This is to say that employers and employes best learn how to work together through the practical experience of working together. They are having this experience, under the pressure of war, not only at the top level in Washington, but all the way down the line throughout the country. They are having it in labor-management committees in individual plants, in war-bond committees formed to promote payroll savings plans, in the run-of-the-mill collective bargaining conferences which thresh out the details of working conditions in hundreds of thousands of places of employment without publicity or serious disagreement. It is a form of experience which augurs more stable and harmonious industrial relations in the postwar future.

Sweden And Norway

By Joachim Joesten

Postwar Policies

ONE OF the most interesting and intricate postwar problems concerns the future relationship between Sweden and Norway.

Before the war, relations between Sweden and Norway were close and cordial. The Nazi invasion of April 9, 1940, brought this harmonious state of affairs to an abrupt end.

When the Norwegian King and government, on June 7, 1940, moved to London, to continue the fight from abroad, as they had been instructed to do at the last session of the Storting, Swedish-Norwegian relations lapsed into a curious state of semi-suspension. The Swedish minister to Oslo, Baron Johan Beck-Friis, did not follow King Haakon into exile, but he was not accredited to the Quisling regime either; instead, he was quietly shifted to Lisbon, without the formality of a recall from Haakon's court. On the other hand, the Norwegian government-in-exile not only maintained its legation in Stockholm, but enlarged it in the interest of the thousands of Norwegian refugees pouring into Sweden; its official contacts with Swedish authorities, however, were on the whole limited to the refugee problem. Further to complicate the situation, Quisling also established in Stockholm a semi-diplomatic mission which the Swedes recognized de facto (but not de jure) by treating with it on questions concerning occupied Norway.

A Few Week Ago

This anomalous state of affairs continued for three years. A few weeks ago, however, reports from Stockholm indicated that the Swedish government at last had decided to resume relations with King Haakon and his government in London. In order to placate the Germans, a cautious arrangement was made: Minister Beck-Friis, who was nominally still accredited to King Haakon, since he had not been recalled, was instructed to proceed to London, without abandoning his Lisbon post.

Coming on the heels of President Roosevelt's significant statement early last May which explicitly recognized King Haakon and his government as the only Norwegian authorities with whom the Allies would deal when they reconquer Norway, this Swedish move is a revealing straw in the wind. Given Sweden's well-known realistic approach to things, the reappointment of Minister Beck-Friis to King Haakon's court shows (a) that the Swedes now are convinced of Germany's ultimate defeat; and (b) that they are fully aware of the necessity to reestablish good relations with the Norwegian regime of yesterday and tomorrow.

This is not going to be an easy task, for the war has disunited the Scandinavian family of nations more than any other regional group of countries. Whereas, four years ago the policies of the northern states followed much the same pattern, each of them is now in a different position. While one of the group, Finland, has become Germany's belligerent ally, another member of the group, Norway, is at war with the Reich: A third, Denmark, is occupied by the Germans, and "collaborates" within limits; a fourth, Iceland, is much in the same position toward the Allies; and Sweden is neutral.

Insuperable Task

Under these conditions, it would seem to be an almost insuperable task to bring the five nations together again into anything like the close association existing between them before the war. Yet this is, apparently, the principal aim of Sweden's postwar policy.

A Scandinavian bloc committed to a common foreign and defense policy, as viewed from Stockholm, would naturally be led by Sweden, the most populous and by far most powerful of the northern countries; it would, therefore, necessarily inherit certain traditional hallmarks of Swedish foreign policy, like for instance the latter's ingrained distrust and dislike of Russia.

To this plan, spokesmen of the Norwegian government in London have clearly and repeatedly said "no." All statements of policy issued by that government in the last few years have concurred on these basic principles: (a) that Norway will not return to her prewar neutrality, but intends to remain one of the United Nations, in peace as in war; (b) that, as a result of the Nazi invasion, Norway has become conscious of her role as an Atlantic Power whose fate is more closely tied up with that of the Atlantic Powers, Great Britain and U. S. A., than with the fate of her Scandinavian neighbors; and (c) that she desires to live not only in peace but in friendship with Russia.

And on June 2, the Norwegian Ambassador to the United States, Wilhelm Munthe de Morgenstierne issued a formal statement on Norwegian policy which contained the following passages: "While we fervently desire close and friendly ties with our Scandinavian brothers, our relationship must evidently be on the firm basis of the principles and the policies of the victors in this World War of Liberty, the United Nations."

On The Move Again

The Third German Offensive

GERMANY'S latest offensive in Russia lifts a corner, though only a corner, of the thick veil of mystery in which the Wehrmacht's strategic plans have been wrapped during recent months.

For just over 100 days an unnatural quiet reigned on the Eastern Front. But it was assumed that this lull would automatically end with the return of fighting weather, presumably early in June.

In the meantime, however, the Battle of Tunisia came to a sudden and spectacular end early in May, the cities of west Germany and particularly the Ruhr began to be pounded into rubble by Allied air power, the Mediterranean was made safe for Allied shipping and Italy and her surrounding islands were exposed to bombing and invasion.

These developments could not help but have a bearing on Germany's military plans. When June came and went with nothing happening on the Eastern Front, the belief arose in Allied circles that perhaps nothing would happen, that Germany had been weakened to the point where her offensive power had disappeared.

THAT BELIEF appears to have been unwarranted. Yet it is still too early to assume that the present German offensive in Russia is the companion piece to the offensive carried out by the Wehrmacht in 1941 and 1942.

It is true that Germany has thrown an enormous weight of armor into the fight in the Bryansk-Kursk-Orel sector—the Russians claim to have destroyed more than 1000 tanks in the first two days alone—and that the Wehrmacht appears to be ready to risk heavy losses of manpower in the hope of cracking the Russian lines.

Yet the possibility remains that great as is the scale of the German effort its aim is basically defensive and its objectives are limited and local. In other words, the Nazi high command may feel that the present operations are necessary in order to permit the German army to secure its defensive lines in Russia so as to be in a position to concentrate the force it will need to oppose the Allies in the west when an invasion of continental Europe is attempted.

MUCH DEPENDS on Russia's strength. If Russia is now weak, if the Red army lacks the strength to blunt the spearhead of the German drive, there is no doubt but that Germany will take advantage of her opportunities and launch another drive on Moscow, or, alternately, by-pass Moscow for a thrust in the direction of the Volga.

If Russia's strength is great that will be demonstrated soon enough. There is no reason to believe that Germany is now completely and unalterably committed to an all-out offensive of the 1941 and 1942 varieties.

An additional factor in Germany's present strategy may very well be her guess, whether informed or erroneous, as to the actual Allied plans.

Recent months have seen a rising crescendo of Allied talk of invasion. Evidence indicates that the Germans have not taken this talk lightly. On the other hand their calculations may be that the Allies are not prepared to invade Europe immediately or in the near future, or at least not at points—France or the Low Countries—for instance, where such action would automatically compel the Wehrmacht to divert large forces from the east to the west.

IT IS TRUE, of course, that now as in the spring of 1941, when Germany and Russia were still at peace, the presence on Germany's eastern flank of a very large and powerful Russian force is the dominant factor determining German strategy. Indeed, more so now than ever because the more Germany has to reckon on the necessity of strengthening her garrisons in west Europe, the Balkans and Italy, the greater the potential threat from the Red army. The destruction of that army remains, therefore, the No. 1 objective of the Wehrmacht.

In view of the fact that the Red army was not destroyed by the multi-pronged German drive of 1941 and the more limited but still very ambitious offensive of last year, the Nazis can hardly assume that this objective can be achieved now.

That being the case, it is more than likely that Hitler will hesitate before committing the great bulk of his armed force in an Eastern campaign unless he is absolutely convinced that the Allies will do nothing in western Europe this year.

In this connection it is important to note that nowhere—neither in Russia nor the Mediterranean nor western Europe—does the Luftwaffe enjoy the superiority it once did. At best it enjoys only parity on the Eastern Front, suffers from an inferiority in the west and is hopelessly outclassed in the Mediterranean.

Under the circumstances, therefore, an all-out offensive in Russia, unless the Red army is very much weaker than any one in Allied countries has supposed, would be an invitation to suicide.

There was a time when Hitler could afford to sacrifice a Hamburg to the R. A. F., in order to capture a Rostov from the Russians. That day is over.

Letters To The Editor

Communications must carry the writer's name and address, though pen names are permitted at the editor's discretion. Letters should be held to not more than 200 words. They are subject to condensation.

Production Trends

Public discussions of the relation between wages, prices and the cost of living, such as your editorial of July 3 on "WBL's White Flag," distort the picture when they entirely leave out of account a vital factor in the equation—production trends.

Suppose a farmer increases his output of potatoes from 100 bushels in 1942 to 150 bushels in 1943. Even with stable prices his cash return from their sale will represent an increase of 50 per cent. No one would think of terming this increased income, attributable to increased production, as inflationary.

One example will illustrate the point. Figures of the War Labor Board (which no one has asserted are false) show that nearly three-quarters of the increase in total wage payments between September, 1942, and February, 1943, resulted from increased man-hours worked. Since such increases necessarily represent increases in output, they cannot possibly be called inflationary. Similarly, wage increases representing greater per hour output are not of themselves inflationary.

Pressure Cookers

There are still many so-called patriotic American citizens sitting secure and safe in their own homes with pressure cookers gathering dust in attics or basements.

Maintaining a high nutritional standard is one of the big objectives of our Government and it is only by canning the surplus non-acid foods that this standard can be obtained.

Homemakers who are largely responsible for the preservation of life-giving foods have a real contribution to make.

With the scarcity of pressure cookers every one owning one is urged to share it with your neighbor. Make it work day and night as unquestionably they are in much better condition in use than lying idle.

Place your cooker into immediate service. You may not receive a citation or decoration, but you will win the lifelong respect and esteem of neighbors and friends. This is a critical time when every one is obligated to help their neighbor.

Pressure cookers are ammunition so pass them on and on and on.

Eye Exercises

In a recent issue you published a letter from Dr. Logan Clendening under the caption "Physician Debunks Huxley Book of Eye Exercises." It may interest your readers to know that there are many people who do not consider Huxley's book "bunk" for the very good reason that they have been benefited by the treatments outlined. The number includes myself, my family, one of my friends, and at least a dozen people I have met at the office where I am undergoing treatment. Nor can members of this group be considered gullible. Most are college graduates trying to get into some branch of the armed services. All once wore glasses prescribed by orthodox eye doctors, and most are now getting along with less powerful lenses or with no glasses at all. Probably half of this group, after having been initially rejected for the services because of poor vision, have now passed the tests and been accepted.

It is possible the exact reasons for the improvements noted may be uncertain, although Mr. Huxley's explanations seem convincing. But whether or not the original theories are correct it is results that interest most of us. And on that score, can Dr. Clendening cite instances of people who have conscientiously followed the prescribed treatments and been injured by so doing—enough instances to justify his branding as deluded the many people who have followed the treatments and been benefited?

An orchid to the Rev. Fletcher D. Parker of Hartford, Conn., for his courage in challenging the OPA on its pleasure driving ban and its Gestapo methods in trying to dictate the personal lives of our people.

The Government can claim no powers which are not granted by the United States Constitution. The Constituion is the only source of power authorizing action by any branch of the Federal Government. No department of the Government has any other powers than those delegated to it by the people.

We Americans are going to keep our Constitution and Bill of Rights word for word and see to it that every one of our elected as well as appointed officials live up to it.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

If a Newspaper Were Run the Washington Way

1. The paper decides to expand. It named a new mangaging editor, D. Cheevers McWinch.

2. The publisher, Oscar Bopps, is photographed giving McWinch the warm hand of welcome and telling him to shoot the works.

3. Mr. McWinch is given the largest private office in the building, told he will have a free hand, and asked if he would like fresh roses on his desk.

4. McWinch comes to work on the second day to find two strangers have moved in. He is about to make inquires when a desk is moved in for a third.

5. He asks if there isn't some mistake. Two of the strangers smile and say, "Don't mind us, Mr. McWinch; we're just here to direct things. The third shows a letter naming him in complete charge.

6. McWinch tries to communicate with the boss but finds his phone dead.

7. He decides that what the paper needs is three more star reporters. He asks for them. But he gets a couple of photographers, a janitor, and one cheese sandwich on rye instead.

8. His attempts to clear this error up are under way when one of the three strangers, sharing his office, puts on six cartoonists, decides to print the classified ads in color and abruptly orders him to run down to Sweeney's and get them a container of coffee and a pack of cigarettes.

9. He finds circulation dropping fast and announces a plan to get new readers by getting out a better paper. Two of the three strangers ignore his suggestions and declare the thing to do to get readers is to repaint the halls, put in a new press and sell hot dogs in the elevators. The third stranger keeps out of the argument. He is very busy on a plan to build circulation by using green ink, making the city editor wear a zoot suit and having a bingo game in the windows three afternoons a week.

10. McWinch begins to feel a bit cramped.

11. He decides to put the paper to press earlier and print more racing news. A fourth stranger arrives, takes over McWinch's desk and issues a statement that the key to newspaper success is to make an animated cartoon of the weather forecast, carry the baseball scores on the Woman's Page and give a free automobile tire to all readers over 100 years of age.

12. An office boy enters and says "Message from the boss for Mr. McWinch." The strangers all snap "There's nobody by that name in here."

13. McWinch finds the boss and asks if he remembers him.

14. The boss says the name is familiar but he can't recall the face.

15. McWinch shows papers to prove that the boss hired him to run the paper. The boss says "That was over 72 hours ago. You can't hold me to that."

16. A fifth stranger arrives.

17. The boss introduces him as the new chief.

18. The circulation manager rushes in to report everything dropping fast.

19. An edict from somebody nobody has heard of so far arrives, ordering the paper published in an oval shape instead of rectangular, with the society news in Arabic and no semicolons except on Saturdays.

20. McWinch resigns. Nobody pays any attention.

21. Two more strangers arrive to take charge. The room is now so crowded that the boss is asked to step outside and wait in a phone booth.

22. The boss blames all on poor teamwork!

The Frail Sex

Mature judgment convinces me that it is the women who are responsible for the crowding and confusion in the buses and streetcars. It is definitely not the men.

Careless of the comfort of others, the women stand rocklike in the front entrances. They never "move back." Never! Heedless of fellow-passengers, and using the shield of their sex, they madly rush toward the exits, minutes before a stop is reached.

They have never overcome the historic habit of consecutively opening pocketbook and purse and fumbling for their fares, while waiting passengers are obstructed. As always, they stand outside the entrance, plying the car operator with intricate questions, as to destination, etc.

There is a lot more, but as this note radiates benevolence, I will not add it.

Perhaps some day there will be separate transportation for women—but I doubt it. SWEETNESS.

Bare Legs

I read with great interest the letter from Leo Graubnes in your issue of June 26.

I was amazed to hear that I have just returned from West Africa.

I have come to agree with Mr. Graubnes about the unpleasantness of bare legs of a man. I think, though, if a man wears long socks with short trousers he retains a sufficient amount of dignity. On the other hand I'll stick to my theory of a man wearing long sleeves while at work.

Incidentally, the only reason I ever wore a hat was to keep my hair in place.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

The Wallace-Jones Affair

LIPPMANN

IT WOULD be useless for Congress to investigate the brawl between the Vice President of the United States and the Secretary of Commerce, and it would be quite beside the point for the general public to attempt to judge the merits of the dispute. The real question is why such an unseemly affair has exploded in our faces.

When we can answer that question we shall know what is wrong on the home front, and we shall begin to know what ought to be done about it.

IN LOOKING for the answer we may begin by asking ourselves what a strong executive in a well-conducted government would do if two leading members of his official family got into such a public row. The answer is clear and obvious: before paying the slightest attention to their allegations, he would instantly remove both men—Mr. Wallace as chairman of the BEW and Mr. Jones as chairman of the RFC.

This would be done because, without discipline within a government, it is impossible to conduct a government. The President has a rule that his officials must not quarrel publicly. The way to enforce that rule is to remove instantly officials who do quarrel publicly. For when a man takes office in an administration, there are two and only two choices open to him: to remain a member of the team by composing his differences with the other members, or to resign from the team and, then, as a private citizen to exercise his right to speak his mind.

BUT THIS rule, so essential to good government, is unworkable in Washington today because it presupposes an effective method of composing differences within the team. The quarrel between BEW and RFC has smouldered for months. It burst into flame because, as things are set up, the President alone could compose it, or could judge it and decide it. But he wouldn't. He wouldn't because he was too busy with other things, because it bored him, because he never studied it, because he did not wish to offend either Mr. Jones' friends or Mr. Wallace's friends.

Because Mr. Roosevelt conducts Government personally and by improvisation rather than by relying on institutions, like the Cabinet, and an established procedure, the task of settling the issues of the dispute was a painful personal duty from which he shrank. If he had had a War Cabinet, they could have settled it in the early stages before the argument became a personal feud.

For the knowledge that the argument could be settled, and the rule that a man must play ball or retire to the bleachers if he does not agree, would create a team in Washington.

IF THERE were a team, the Administration would not have one-tenth the trouble it is having with Congress. For one thing, if the Administration were united and disciplined within itself, it would not make so many mistakes. Nor would it have one frustrated agency lobbying against another frustrated agency in Congress and in the press.

If at one end of Pennsylvania Avenue, there really were one coherent, agreed, thoughtfully considered program for dealing, let us say, with inflation—a program backed by the Treasury, Agriculture, OPA and all the others concerned—then Congress would have to make the momentous, responsible decision of supporting it or rejecting it. That would be orderly government. But when Congress is invited to vote on one incidental feature, subsidies, before anyone knows what the whole inflation program is to be, need anyone be surprised that Congress is confused and obstructionist?

IT IS generally supposed that the trouble is on the home front alone, and that our foreign relations at least are well-conducted. Unfortunately that is not the case, and the same indiscipline, the same lack of coherence and considered action, the same personalism and improvisation exist there, and will, if not corrected, have long, deep, and very serious consequences. The discerning are already aware of them, and the portents of trouble—not in one place but in many—are already visible.

They arise from the fact that our foreign relations, which ought to be firmly in the hands of the State Department, are carried on through a large number of amorphous and discordant agencies—BEW, RFC, Treasury, OWI, some generals and some admirals. Our foreign relations are not controlled by the State Department because that department is not adequately manned and it has no real head. It contains within itself several headstrong factions. It is said that the President is his own Secretary of State. But if he is, he needs a State Department nonetheless in order to be Secretary of State. In fact he has been handling the greatest and most difficult affairs by intuition, improvisation, and personal feeling.

FOR THIS there will be, unless there is a decided change soon, a reckoning in foreign relations as there is now a reckoning on the home front. For he is blind indeed to the handwriting on the wall who does not see the accumulating evidence.

Girls Help Guard Coast

By John Steinbeck

On Dover's Cliffs

Somewhere in England.—The guns hide in a field of grain and red poppies. You can see the cannon muzzles protruding and aiming at the sky. The battery is on the south coast, in sight of France. There was a time when great flights of German bombers came over this undefended coast and carried their bomb loads to London and Canterbury. But the coast is not undefended now.

The spotters are all over the hills, the complicated and delicate listening posts which can hear a plane miles away, and the spotters are girls. When a strange ship is heard, its position is phoned to the plotters of position and the plotters are girls, too. The sighters are girls. Only the gunners who load and turn the gun itself are men. It is an amazing institution, the mixed battery, something unique in the history of armies.

The barracks are nearby, one for the girls and another for the men. The eating hall is common, the recreation room is common, and the work is common.

Twenty-four hours a day the crews are on duty. They can do what they want within a certain distance from the gun. The girls read and wash their clothing, sew and cook. The kitchen, a temporary affair, is built of kerosene tins filled with sand laid like bricks. The new kitchen is just now being built.

Crews Respond Quickly

The countryside is quiet. The guns are silent. Suddenly the siren howls. Buildings that are hidden in camouflage belch people, young men and women. They pour out, running like mad. The siren has not been going for 30 seconds when the run is over, the gun is manned, the target spotted. In the control room underground the instruments have found their target. A serious girl has fixed it. The numbers have been transmitted and the ugly barrels whirled. Above ground, in a concrete box, a serious girl speaks into a telephone. "Fire," she says quietly. The hillside rocks with the explosion of the battery. The field grass shakes and the red poppies shudder in the blast. New orders come up from below and the girl says "Fire."

The process is machine-like, exact. There is no waste movement and no nonsense. These girls seem to be natural soldiers. They are soldiers, too. They resent above anything being treated like women when they are near the guns. Their work is hard and constant. Sometimes they are alerted to the guns 30 times in a day and a night. They may fire on a marauder ten times in that period. They have been bombed and strafed, and there is no record of any girl flinching.

The commander is very proud of them. He is fiercely affectionate toward his battery. He says a little bitterly: "All right, why don't you ask about the problem of morals? Every one wants to know about that. I'll tell you—there is no problem."

Battery's Esprit de Corps

He tells about the customs that have come into being in this battery, a set of customs which grew automatically. The men and the women sing together, dance together, and, let any one of the women be insulted, and he has the whole battery on his neck. But when a girl walks out in the evening, it is not with one of the battery men, nor do the men take the girls to the movies. There have been no engagements and no marriages between members of the battery. Some instinct among the people themselves has told them trouble would result. These things are not matters of orders but of custom.

The girls like this work and are proud of it. It is difficult to see how the housemaids will be able to go back to dusting furniture under querulous mistresses; how the farm girls will be able to go back to the tiny farms of Scotland and the Midlands. This is the great exciting time of their lives. They are very important, these girls. The defense of the country in their area is in their hands.

The manager of the local theater has set aside two rows of seats this evening for members of the battery who are not on duty. The girls who are to go change from their trousers to neat khaki skirts and blouses. They spend a good deal of time making themselves pretty. They sit in the theater, leaning forward with excitement. The film is a little stinker called "War Correspondent," made 6000 miles from any conflict, where people are not likely ever to see any.

Girls Enjoy Film

It concerns an American war correspondent who through pure handsomeness, cleverness, bravery and hokum defeats every resource of the Third Reich. The Gestapo and the German Army are putty in his hands. It is a veritable Flynn of a picture.

But all these girls who have been bombed and strafed, who have shot enemies out of the sky and then gone back to mending socks—are these girls scornful? Not in the least. They sit on the edges of their seats. When the stupid Gestapo men creep up to the hero they shriek to warn him. This is more real to them than this afternoon, when they fired on a Focke Wulf 190. The immaculate hero who emerges from a one-man Dunkerque, with combed hair and immaculate dress is the true, the good, the beautiful.

This afternoon the girls were sweaty, dusty and they smelled of cordite. That was their job—this is war. And when the film is done they walk back to their barracks, talking excitedly of the glories of Hollywood warfare. They go back to their routine job of defending the coast of England from attack, and as they walk home they sing, "You'd be sooo naice to come 'ome to, You'd be so naice by a fire."

Taft Fears For Freedom Of Press, Radio

By the Associated Press

A new congressional definition of the authority of the Federal Communications Commission over broadcasting was demanded yesterday by Senator Taft (Republican) of Ohio, who charged that an administrative "passion for Government control" threatens the freedom of both press and radio.

He cited the Government's antitrust suit against the Associated Press as an illustration of what he called "reckless disregard for freedom of the press" and asserted that it has been only "the ingrained insistence of our people that has prevented any great progress toward actual suppresion of the freedom of newspapers and magazines."

"Blood Brother"

He called radio "the blood brother of the newspaper as an instrument of free speech," and said the broadcasters had been brought under closer control than Congress had intended.

In a speech prepared for delivery in the Senate, the Ohio Republican said a recent decision of the Supreme Court has been interpreted as augmenting the authority of the FCC to regulate chain broadcasting "far beyond any intent of Congress which can be read into the Federal communications act by the average layman having some knowledge of its history."

He urged that the FCC suspend the exercise of these powers until Congress can act, declaring:

"If Congress feels that rules to prevent monopoly in the network field should be added, they should be made by Congress and not by a subordinate agency of the Government. And by no means should such regulations be allowed to open the door of Government control of radio, as the act of 1934 is now interpreted by the Supreme Court."

Fears Subjection

"The present Administration has shown no concern for freedom of the press at home," he said. "The suit brought against the Associated Press under the Sherman Act shows the attitude of the Administration that the press and distribution of news shall be subjected to the same kind of rules as the manufacturer or the chain store.

"Regardless of the legalities of the case, it is clear that the policy which directed the bringing of this suit is part of the general passion for Government control, and those who brought it show a reckless disregard for freedom of the press. Those who drafted the Sherman Act surely had no thought that it could ever be used for such a purpose."

Nelson Denies Censorship; Sees Maas

By the Associated Press

Representative Maas (Republican) of Minnesota talked yesterday with Donald M. Nelson, War Production Board chief, and later said he was "quite convinced" that Nelson never approved policies under which, Maas said, the WPB printing and publishing division "showed evidence of being used for control of the press, including magazine and book publishing."

Maas said Nelson had agreed to his recommendation that proceedings of the printing and publishing division be published.

"This is satisfactory to me," Maas said, "as I am sure that there is no danger of a secret control of the press by controlling white paper so long as all of the proceedings are open to public examination."

Maas issued his statement after Nelson denied that the WPB exercised any censorship of magazines and books by withholding paper allotments and asserted such charges by Maas in the House yesterday were based on misinformation.

In denying Maas' censorship charge, Nelson declared that "nothing resembling censorship is practiced," directly or indirectly by the WPB.

"The existing system of paper conservation orders has been devised purposely to avoid any possibility of censorship," he said, adding:

"We are faced with a diminishing supply of paper—what is printed on that paper is not within our province.

"Publishers of books, magazines, and newspapers all have a quota equal to approximately 90 per cent of the paper they have been using in the past. Under the published orders of the WPB they can print anything they choose on that paper."

When publishers need more paper than they are allowed, they may appeal for more on hardship grounds, Nelson pointed out, but when relief is granted it is done "without any consideration of editorial content."

Campaigns Found Pure

Senate Probe Ends

A special Senate committee appointed to investigate senatorial campaign expenditures in the 1942 elections reported today that it had looked into charges in five States, and recommended Federal action in none of them, but suggested strengthening of laws which prohibit senatorial campaign contributions from any corporation engaged in interstate commerce.

While voting unanimously to take no further action regarding the 1942 primary in New Jersey, the committee found that radio time in behalf of Albert W. Hawkes, the successful candidate for the Republican nomination, had been bought on Station WOR and that the money paid the station had not been included in his reported campaign expenditures of $49,555.56. New Jersey law permits a senatorial candidate to spend up to $50,000.

New Jersey Case

The committee said it decided a statement of all of the facts in the matter should be referred to the attorney general of New Jersey.

Other charges originating in Oklahoma, West Virginia, Tennessee and New Hampshire were investigated, but no action was recommended.

In its general conclusions, however, the committee said serious consideration should be given to the subject of "shadow filings" by candidates with the same name or initials as other, better-known candidates, but added that "this is perhaps most effectively dealt with through State and party agencies."

Concluding that existing State and Federal limitations on campaign expenditures have been largely ineffective, the committee also recommended that ambiguities and uncertainties concerning the limitations be removed.

Detailed Statements

It said senatorial candidates should be required to file detailed statements of expenditures in primary, convention and general election campaigns, and that any individual, group or association soliciting and spending funds in behalf of any senatorial candidate be required to file with the secretary of the Senate the same detailed statements now required of the candidates in a general election.

Senator McFarland (Democrat), Arizona, heads the committee. Other members are Senators Andrews (Democrat) Florida, Mead (Democrat) New York, Willis (Republican), Indiana, and Aiken (Republican), Vermont.

The Oklahoma investigation concerned the filing of Josh Lee, a northeastern Oklahoma farmer, as a candidate in the Democratic primary against the then Senator Josh Lee. The State election board struck Farmer Lee's name from the ballot and the committee found no further need for investigation.

Summing up expenditures in the senatorial primaries of 1942, the committee reported that 170 of the 187 candidates for 36 Senate seats reported total expenditures of $800,390.55 in 33 States. Seventeen candidates failed to report to the committee.

Jap Segregation Plan

Loyal, Disloyal to Be Sorted

By Mary Spargo
Post Staff Writer

Segregation of loyal from disloyal Japanese now at War Relocation Authority centers will start early this fall and is expected to cost one million dollars, Dillon S. Myer, WRA director, told a Dies subcommittee yesterday.

Myer said he was going to ask the Army to assist in moving all Japanese and Japanese-Americans whose first loyalty is to Japan to one center under armed guard.

Indorsing the Senate resolution passed Tuesday requesting such segregation, Myer said he had first determined upon a segregation policy last May, but had been delayed because of transportation and other difficulties.

The center director said the program would be started with those who have openly expressed desire to return to Japan and would include any discovered disloyal by investigation.

Releasing Policy Explained

At the same hearing Myer explained his policy of releasing Japanese-Americans from the camps as rapidly as possible by asserting that the Government stood "on very shaky legal ground" in holding those who are American citizens in detention."

"The evacuation and relocation program," Myer said, "raises important questions of constitutionality. This is so because two-thirds of the persons of Japanese ancestry evacuated from the West Coast military areas are citizens of the United States."

Explaining that WRA believed the evacuation itself was a necessary and constitutional move, he added that detention was not necessarily a part of that program.

"The detention or internment of citizens of the United States against whom no charges of disloyalty or subversiveness have been made, or can be made, for longer than the minimum period necessary to screen the loyal from the disloyal, and to provide the necessary guidance for relocation, is beyond the power of the War Relocation Authority," Myer asserted.

Myer pointed out that writs of habeas corpus might be secured on behalf of these citizens, and that the Supreme Court decision of June 21, 1943, in the case of Gordon Hirabayashi vs. United States did not rule on such detention.

Decision Recalled

The court held curfew for Japanese-Americans was valid but did not rule on the evacuation orders, he said.

Representative Thomas (Republican) of New Jersey interrupted Myer's reading of the prepared statement on the constitutional query to ask if he were addressing the committee or the press. Myer said, "Both."

During the stormy session the WRA director, repeatedly denouncing "alarmist publicity," sharply challenged the committee's chief investigator, Robert E. Stripling, to produce "one shred of evidence" to back up published charges that the WRA was releasing subversive people from its camps.

Representative Costello (Democrat) of California asked Myer if he had not been furnished with a list of names at the close of Tuesday's hearings.

"Yes," Myer said, "a list of names without any addresses in many instances, and with no statement whatever on why these people mentioned were supposed to be subversive. I can't go on that. I must have evidence, if a habeas corpus action is taken."

Myer said he was "very disturbed" about these Dies charges and the fact that he had no evidence on these people.

Thomas interrupted to remark:

"Yes, that's not the only thing you are disturbed about, and you'll be disturbed about more before I get through."

Terming the WRA a "silly social experiment," Thomas asserted he was introducing a bill in the House to have all WRA centers put under control of the War Department.

Representative Costello brought out the fact that in hearings before the Senate Military Affairs Committee the War Department had opposed any such move.

House Servant Requests

The question of whether all Cabinet officers were going to make requests to WRA for Japanese-American house servants was interjected by Thomas after it was disclosed that Attorney General Biddle had sought a houseman for his cousin, Miss Constance Biddle, of Bryn Mawr, Pa., from a WRA camp. The salary offered was $80 a month and maintenance.

Myer replied that so far as he knew only Secretary of the Interior Ickes and Biddle had made any requests. The director, in response to a question from Thomas, denied that the request had any influence on a letter written several months later by Biddle indorsing the agency's program of releasing Japanese-Americans.

Myer said some 15,000 had been released from WRA camps, of which 15 per cent were alien Japanese who had been carefully checked.

Representative Mundt (Republican) of South Dakota, who described Myer's presentation as "a pretty impressive legal argument," questioned the director at length on the policy of "spending taxpayers' funds" to teach judo (Japanese wrestling) and goh (Japanese checkers) at these centers.

Myer agreed when Mundt stated that Americanization would progress faster if American games were taught, and not games that harked back to Japan.

Communist Leader Indorses Hague for His Attitude on War

By the Associated Press

New York, July 7.—An article by a Communist leader in the Daily Worker, Communist newspaper, yesterday indorsed Mayor Frank Hague of Jersey City, who five years ago was carrying on a self-styled "war on Reds and radicals."

The newspaper displayed an article signed by William Norman, State secretary of the New Jersey Communist Party, which stated that the perpetuation of "a misconception . . . with regard to Frank Hague and so-called Hagueism" was a design for "an attack against the President."

"The fact is that Frank Hague supports the President and the President's win-the-war policies," the article contended. "This is indisputable and is a major test today."

In Jersey City, Hague commented, "I don't know anything about it."

In 1938 Hague denied speech permits to individuals he considered undesirable and opposed attempts of the American Civil Liberties Union to have a showdown on the free-speech question raised. The upshot was a Federal court action.

In the course of his testimony—on June 14, 1938—Hague advocated that native-born dissenters be banished to "a camp in Alaska" to "keep them away from the American people."

"The Reds have no right to express their views if their intention is the overthrow or destruction of the Government," Hague testified.

He was asked his "method of handling Communists," and replied:

"Suppress them—just as we're doing in this case, denying them the right to public gatherings because of the danger of violence and bloodshed."

Norman said in his article yesterday that Hague and his organization were behind the President 100 per cent and that anyone who thought that anything else mattered at this time was "serving the demagogic purpose of reaction."

Solid Literature Declared Another Casualty of War

Chicago, July 7 (AP).—With dad wearied by a tough day at the factory, mother rolling bandages, and the youngsters out gathering scrap metal, the reading of books of solid literary quality has gone into a war-time slump.

Althea Warren of Los Angeles, new president of the American Library Association, so reported tonight at her inaugural dinner. She related that reading rooms, overcrowded during the depression, now were "half empty."

In her prepared address, she stated there also was widespread interest in post-war social progress, and said:

"People who used to consume three or four volumes a week now spend a month on one title like the Beveridge report or MacKinder's 'Democratic Ideals and Realty.'"

Women Demand Right to Serve On Vessels Again

New York, July 7 (AP).—The National Maritime Union today adopted a resolution of tribute to the captain and crew of the Booker T. Washington, a merchant ship operated by Negro and white personnel working together as "a symbol of Democracy."

Another resolution demanded women be permitted to return to sea in United States ships.

Capt. Hugh Mulzac, master of the Booker T. Washington, told the union's 300 delegates at the annual convention the ship "is giving a demonstration today that the entire world is watching."

Miss Harriet Thorson, who formerly worked on Grace Line ships, presented a report from women members of the union, asking the organization exert pressure to have the ban lifted against women working on United States ships. She said she represented 400 American seafaring women.

Pilot of Damaged U. S. Bomber Made Crew Jump, Died at Stick

By the Associated Press

London, July 7.—The gallant story of First Lieut. John J. Howell of South Miami, Fla., who held his damaged plane level until the crew bailed out and then plunged to his death still at the controls was told today by the United States Army headquarters.

Howell has been awarded a posthumous Distinguished Service Cross for "extraordinary heroism."

He was flying a fast medium bomber on its first mission in the European theater—a rooftop height attack May 14 on the Velzen power plant.

Just after the plane released its load squarely into the target concentration, shells and bullets hit it. Oil covered the windshield, forcing Howell to fly blind. The control column was knocked out, and Co-pilot First Lieut. Howard E. Short of Sequin, Tex., wiped the windshield instrument panel with a flying jacket to find the plane had been flying about 30 feet above ground. Regaining altitude, they crossed the coast.

A survey of the ship revealed that in addition to many shell and bullet holes the bomb bay doors would not close, the landing gear would not go down, one of the gas tanks was pierced and nearly empty. Although the pilot's control column was useless, the co-pilot's was intact.

When the ship was over its own field, Howell ordered the crew to jump. Short stayed with him to help crash-land the plane which was all but falling apart.

"Short," said Howell, "we can't land this thing."

"I stood by the open bomb bay door," Short said. "Howell was flying the wreck by himself now. With his controls shot to shreds he was operating the pilot's rudder controls with his feet and leaning across the cockpit to reach the co-pilot's column. He turned and waved to me and I jumped.

"Just as my parachute opened," Short continued, "I saw the bomber swerve and the left wing do down. It recovered momentarily and then dove into the ground with Lieutenant Howell still aboard."

Short explained it was easy to jump safely from a medium bomber on a level course but this plane was too nearly out of control to hold itself level, so for the last man the chance was slim. Howell knew this when he made his decision and ordered the copilot to bail out, Short added.

9 New Navy Casualties

The Navy announced yesterday 9 casualties, including 6 dead and 3 missing. This brings to 27,043 the total of Navy, Marine Corps and Coast Guard casualties reported to next of kin since December 7, 1941. The grand total includes 8215 dead, 4734 wounded, 10,501 missing and 3593 prisoners.

"Lady of Burlesque" Is Stripped of Offensiveness

Stanwyck Stars in Backstage Mystery; Former Capitalite Clicks as Producer; Items of News and Gossip of the Theater

IT MAY BE merely that the milder manifestations of burlesque shocked delicate sensibilities, or perhaps a violent case of renovation set in before the prints reached Washington, but Tuesday morning's preview of "Lady of Burlesque" somehow seemed strangely innocuous.

BARBARA STANWYCK

There is in it practically none of the double entendre upon which burlesque in the flesh so largely relies. The lines and situations, to be sure, are fairly tawdry and will not engage the interest of the esthetes, but they are not offensive. The costuming might be something else again, although it goes to no such lengths of revelation as usually encountered on the "smoker circuits"—so I hear.

Not having read Gypsy Rose Lee's "The G-String Murders," upon which the picture is based, I am unable to say with what fidelity the film adheres to the text of the book. Those who have both read the book and seen the picture tell me it sticks pretty close in all but one respect. There are fewer clues to the identity of the slayer on the screen than there were on the printed page. In celluloid form, it is a pretty baffling business.

In this first production for United Artists, Producer Hunt Stromberg has managed a phase of the theater not too well known to many in the picture audiences with sufficient minuteness to cause the police inspector investigating the backstage crimes to express the frequent opinion that "burlesque is a remarkable profession." The cast assembled by Mr. Stromberg, headed by Barbara Stanwyck and Michael O'Shea, a newcomer to the screen, at times make it seem even more so. Which is probably why "Lady of Burlesque," despite its typically "corny" opening sequences, has been mopping up, as the saying goes, wherever it has been shown.

A Veteran Trouper at 17

They are making quite a to-do over this young fellow Donald O'Connor, costarred with Gloria Jean in Universal's "Mr. Big," scheduled as the next attraction at RKO-Keith's Theater—unless "Forever and a Day" makes good its title and runs that long.

Master O'Connor, it seems, is 17 years old and has been on the stage 16 of them. This comes about through the fact that he joined the vaudeville act of the O'Connor Family at the ripe old age of 13 months and has trouped virtually ever since. From this "lifetime" experience Don has acquired all the tricks of his trade—to the great consternation, a good deal of the time, of his directors. They never know what he is going to do next, or when. A script to Donald is merely something into which to interpolate what at the moment he deems a timely "gag" or impromptu comedy routine. It all tends to age his bosses prematurely and afford his audiences the "bang" always generated by the spontaneity of youth.

Master O'Connor should be an exhilarating kid to watch, come whenever he comes.

A card postmarked what appears to be Baile Atha Cliath, June 5, just to hand from Dan Terrell, erstwhile publicist for the Loew theaters, fills us with a vast sense of deprivation: "If you were here, we could go see those new films, 'Idiot's Delight' and 'Angels with Dirty Faces.' The first stars an actor named Gable, who may catch on pretty well."

Hometown Boy Makes Good!

On the same mail, but postmarked New York, July 6, comes a slightly more comprehensive message from Meyer Davis, "your old Washington pal and Dead End kid himself," the orchestra tycoon, latterly turned showman:

"I have underwritten two-thirds of the forthcoming production of Hall Johnson's 'Run Little Chillun,' the all-colored folk-drama with music. It was originally produced in New York in 1933 and had a moderate run. About three years ago, they did it on the coast, where it ran for 59 weeks. It is a very stirring play, employing a cast of about 90 people, including the entire Hall Johnson Choir of 50. It will be directed by Clarence Muse, who put it on on the Coast, and we start rehearsals this coming week, opening in New York somewhere between August 10 and 15. Perry Watkins is doing the scenery and Felicia Sorel the choregraphy. The producing firm is Lew Cooper, George Jessel and myself.

"In addition to the above, have taken a very substantial interest in the forthcoming New Opera Company production of 'The Merry Widow,' starring Jan Kiepura, Marta Eggerth and Melville Cooper, which opens August 3, at the Majestic Theater, in New York. This will be a very elaborate production, with Robert Stolz, famous Viennese composer, handling the orchestra, Brentano the staging and Balanchine the dances. The book is being modernized, but the music is being left intact. No boogie-woogie interpolations.

"My other one, 'Tomorrow the World,' is going great guns and should run at least a year on Broadway. A second company for Chicago is now being formed and, after that, one for the Coast. We are asking $350,000 for the movie rights—may take $345,000!

"'By Jupiter' closed, as you no doubt know, after a run of 59 weeks, which, incidentally, is the longest any Rodgers and Hart play has run. Ray Bolger was ordered by his doctor to take a rest or suffer a breakdown. We didn't do so badly, however—got our money back and made a profit of about 50 per cent. That's all for now. Will keep you posted if anything new comes up. Kindest regards, cordially, Meyer."

As we were saying, the old boy seems to have done all right for himself, just fiddling around!

Gossip From Gotham

New York, July 7.

Last week the newspapers reported that Franco may bring to Madrid the son of the late King Alfonso, Juan, and make him King of the restored monarchy. Some newsreel companies have a record of Juan's sentiments about his return. These reels were made when Juan first was mentioned as the possible ruler of Spain. But those reels never will be exhibited, because Juan proved to be a poor newsreel subject. He's a lamentable stammerer.

Lieut. Lee Tracy, the film star, told the troops about some of his experiences as a Broadway actor. Tracy reminisced of his tour in the hit show, "The Cat and the Canary," which played a one-night stand in Glenn Falls. On the train leaving the city the next morning, Tracy saw a man opposite him reading the local paper. The actor asked: "May I look at your paper, please? I want to see the drama notice on the back page. It's about me" . . . O. K., buddy, but return it," the man answered. "I got a notice, too—on the front page." Tracy saw the photo on the front page. The man was on his way to Auburn Prison for robbery.

Miss Dvorak was headed for stardom in Hollywood after her appearance in "Scarface." They both realized that in the film colony this usually results in a domestic rift. And so they both left Hollywood for a long vacation, traveled around the world, saw the Orient and the capitals of Europe and lived for months in a 50-francs-a-week pension in Paris. Then Fenton brought her back to Hollywood, and said: "Now that you've had a chance to live—be a star, if you care to."

"I'd be glad to do that," said Jolson, "if I could see a building go down the stretch, and if I could follow it to Hialeah, Belmont and Empire City" . . . One of the old popular songs now being plugged for revival is Arthur Schwartz's "You and the Night and the Music." HEDDA HOPPER

Likely Young Actor Makes a Hit

Hollywood, Calif, July 7.—Met Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Gould, editor of Ladies' Home Journal, and their daughter on "Destination, Tokyo" set. Found Cary Grant and a couple of youngsters—one was Bob Hutton and the other Bill Prince. Bill comes from "Eve of St. Mark" on Broadway. He toured a season with Harry Carey in "Ah, Wilderness." He's sensitive, has great feeling for acting. I don't wonder movies puzzle him. He was playing an interne on a submarine. Told Commander Grant one of the crew had to be operated on for appendicitis. Says he, "I'm only a pill pusher—not a surgeon. Never operated before, but the kid will die if he doesn't have one." He's ordered to perform the operation. A scene like that takes a bit of doing. And just as they were ready to shoot it the cameraman ordered perspiration on his face. Glycerine was squirted on from a flit gun. Cameraman said, "I only want it on his forehead and upper lip." By the time the scene was ended, I'd have let the kid do an appendectomy on me.

CARY GRANT

Slapstick

On next stage Ann Sheridan was getting some rough treatment from a bunch of comedy cops, with Bob Murphy, a singing sergeant, in "Shine on, Harvest Moon." Bob's giving so many parties at the house of Murphy for the gang he'll be out of pocket on the picture, but he's sure havin' fun. Annie, with an 18-inch waist and padded hips, is black and blue from those old ironsides, and for a change, would like a good dramatic part where she doesn't have to be manhandled . . . Leroy Prinz, who put the boys from "This Is the Army" through their paces, was rough on them one day. Some even complained. The colonel came to Prinz and said. "Do you know what the boys are saying about you?" . . . Prinz: "No, what?" He was told. Whereupon Leroy yelled: "Ha! that's nothing! You should hear what they call you!"

Idea for Free

Since Bruce Bairnsfather has a new book called "Jeeps and Jests" out, wonder why Columbia doesn't bring old Bill up to date with Bairnsfather's latest, and star Charlie Coburn in it? He made old Bill famous . . . Marjorie Rinaker, from Chicago, has written a play about Sarah Bernhardt which is being considered for Luise Rainer on Broadway . . . It's a toss-up whether Kay Aldridge will come back and work for Metro or marry Johnny McClain . . . Eddie Arnold says Hollywood is seeking a fifth freedom—freedom from "B" pictures . . . Frank Craven will be a grandfather any minute now . . . Dorothy McGuire, meeting a tall, dark, good looker at the airport the other day, would introduce him to none.

Pat O'Brien will do three this year—" The Iron Major," which he's on. "His Butler's Sister" with Durbin, and "Marine Raiders." He'll try to spend weekends with his family at Del Mar. They've moved down. Son Shawn, age 7, refused to go by train, insisted upon riding beside the driver on the truck which moved them. Pat said the most frequent expression heard among our men in the Caribbean area was, "I'm Just Jungle Jolly" . . . Jane Wyman, riding in a crowded bus, reached into her pocket and felt a grab at her wrist. A man standing next to her said, "If you weren't so pretty, I'd turn you in," as he removed her hand from his pocket . . . Jerome Zerbe, New York society's pet photographer, is in Australia with the United States Navy . . . Henry Hull plays the American in "Life Boat" . . . Anthony Quinn rides again in "Buffalo Bill" . . . Now that Betty Grable is Mrs. Harry James, George Raft is taking an interest in his career. Wants to know if his last picture made good.

Smart Idea

They're making many prints of "This Is the Army," aim being to send it overseas and show it in occupied countries as soon as our troops take over . . . The scene President Roosevelt laughed at most in "Stage Door Canteen" was Ed Wynn explaining the workings of the place to a soldier: "Here actors wait on you. Down in Washington there's a canteen where Congressmen do it. Gee, I'll bet the boys starve to death there! You know how long it takes a Congressman to pass anything?" . . . Stunning Stuttering Sam from Texas has a writing job at Warners, but is wanted by two directors as an actress. She's good looking, and her stuttering is mighty funny.

The Rape of Broadway

Harry Cohn was clapping hands when he got a look at Shelley Winter, the comedienne from "Rosa Linda" who's under contract to him. Harry, also through Ad Schulberg, signed Alfred Drake, the toast of New York, from "Oklahoma," but he can't report till the play's finished . . . Mary Ann Hyde, Errol Flynn's steadiest, landed a part in "Up in Arms" the day she got back from Mexico. Errol's pal Freddy McEvoy and wife are also home from there, while Cole Porter takes down with him Roger Davis, Billy Haines and Jimmy Shields. He aims to use Mexico as the background for his new musical . . . Margo's getting the highest price of any Hollywood actress for "Camille" in Mexico. She's hoping De Cordova will be her Armand . . . Star Commutes From Far Places

Hollywood, July 7 (INS).—John Halliday, who commuted in peacetime from Honolulu to Hollywood for his movie roles, is coming back in wartime. When Columbia asked him to play the role of the publisher in "Cover Girls" he said it all depended upon how soon they needed him. He has been touring the various islands playing "Spring Time For Henry" and he wanted to finish his camp tour first.

ALICE FAYE

The shooting schedule was rearranged to give him the chance. John is the only Hollywood actor living in Honolulu. The Hallidays live on a ranch facing the ocean and when the Japs bombed Pearl Harbor he had a bird's-eye view of the disaster. He will play the man who gives Rita Hayworth her first break and it's safe to predict he will be good, because he is a swell actor.

As soon as the galley proofs reached Hollywood, "The Tree Grows in Brooklyn," Ethel Smith's first book, came in for some strong competitive bidding. Joseph Schenck's snap offer of plenty of cash was accepted while a few of the other boys were making up their minds. While no definite casting will be done until Darryl Zanuck returns to the studio, I have a hunch it will star Alice Faye, who is a Brooklyn gal herself. The story is that of an American family who live in Brooklyn but whose grandparents came from Austria.

The latest Hollywood biography is that of Oliver Hardy and Stan Laurel. They are writing a book very appropriately titled "Through Thick And Thin." They alternate in writing chapters, which sounds a little confusing. But perhaps that's the way a book written by Mr. Fat and Mr. Thin should be. They'll mention all of their leading ladies, and they have quite a bevy, what with the late Jean Harlow, Paulette Goddard, Janet Gaynor, Lupe Velez and their latest, Trudy Marshall, who is in "Dancing Masters" with them.

Chatter in Hollywood: Doris Dudley is torn between her love of the stage and her duty to her child. Jackie Jenkins. Doris has been offered the role in Noel Coward's play, "Blithe Spirit," created by Lenore Corbett, and it is a wonderful chance for her. She hasn't been on the stage since she was with John Barrymore in "My Dear Children," but there is a little matter of Young "Butch," who is under contract to Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and who is one of their most important players. Butch is now in "America" and Doris figures the only way she can take the "Blithe Spirit" role is if he gets time off between pictures.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Mary Parker and Bill Daniels have split as a dance team and she will concentrate on movies; Irene Dunne and Mr. Griffin celebrate their fifteenth wedding anniversary July 16. Who says there are no happy marriages in Hollywood? Claudette Colbert, who spent most of the time while she was in New York in the hospital, is back home.

Curt Siodmak, writer of Hollywood horror movies, has just sold a children's story called "The Story Of Anatol, The Mule;" Dickie Jones and his Ma have gone to New York to discuss a stage offer made him; Dianne Meredith, Gloria Vanderbilt's protege, has been given an M-G-M acting contract. Speaking of Mrs. Vanderbilt, she says Gloria, jr., told her there is no stork expected in the Di Cicco menage.

A bomber pilot in London writes Eddie Robinson his squadron has named their ship "Little Caesar;" Xavier Cugart is back in town for Mae West's picture, "Tropicana." When he finishes he goes to Mexico to be starred in the story of his own life for Alberto Pani; Evelyn Keyes lunching with Charles Vidor's nine-year-old son. Charles has his custody for the summer and Evelyn will probably be his new stepmama; Anita Colby is introducing the new two-tone hair-do—half brown and half blonde.

Pix

"Lady for a Day," second in the series of weekly revivals of Frank Capra films, opened yesterday at the Pix Theater and reasserted itself as a "human interest" picture of the first rank.

Based on the Damon Runyan story of "Apple Annie," "Lady for a Day" unfolds the story of a bunch of city slickers who combine their resources and ingenuities to solace a pitiable Broadway character by making her a "lady" for a single 24 hours, in order that her daughter's love may not be smashed. Excitement is introduced in the form of a kidnaping and altogether entertainment is piled high.

The character of the title is portrayed with a wealth of humor and deep feeling by the late May Robson, with Warren William, Guy Kibbe, Ned Sparks and the late Walter Connolly leading the male cast. Glenda Farrell and Jean Parker are others in important roles.

Even a full 10 years after its original release, "Lady for a Day" still is something to see.

PAULETTE GODDARD won't be seen like this again for a while. In Mark Sandrich's "So Proudly We Hail," she, Claudette Colbert and Veronica Lake appear in the uniforms of United States Army nurses on Bataan and Corregidor.

Donna to Make Technicolor Bow

Hollywood.—Further recognition of Donna Reed's cinema rise came when the young actress was assigned a guest star spot with Red Skelton in "As Thousands Cheer," Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's musical, featuring Kathryn Grayson and Gene Kelly. Her appearance in the film will mark her debut both in comedy and in technicolor.

Donna has just completed the romantic lead in "The Man From Down Under," starring Charles Laughton, and is preparing for the feminine lead opposite Robert Walker in "See Here, Private Hargrove."

Just at Present Hollywood Is Practically Full of "Fall Guys"

By Melrose Gower

Hollywood, July 7—War pictures are making stunt men and women chuckle contentedly; also making not a few studio executives shudder apprehensively.

Every war picture summons every last mother's son and daughter of the stunt clan to work—wherefore the chuckles. But when they're all working at one studio, it often happens that actors and actresses have to do their own dangerous stunts on other lots—wherefore the shudders.

The script of Kay Kyser's new starring vehicle, "Around the World," contains a scene requiring Joan Davis to take a 5 foot fall from a stage into an orchestra pit. Came time to shoot said scene and the call went out for a stunt girl. No dice. Every stunt sister was working in a war picture.

Joan Davis did the fall herself. She did it perfectly. She wasn't even bruised or scratched. But Allan Dwan, who is producing and directing "Around the World" for R. K. O.-Radio, bit clear through the stem of his pipe when she hit the orchestra pit.

Joan Davis could do it because, before she became one of the screen's top comediennes, she was the original "fall girl" of the movies, famous for her flips and tumbles.

"Livvy" Spared Ordeal

But could Olivia De Havilland take a wild, lurching ride on the back of a motorcycle, behind a daredevil stunt man determined to hit every object in sight? It appeared, for a time last week, that such a gamble might have to be taken. The ride, supposedly taken through a Washington park by Miss De Havilland and Sonny Tufts, is an essential part of the plot of their current costarring picture, "Government Girl." The scene had to be set back four days before a stunt girl, Ilene Goodwin, was available.

Equal difficulty was encountered finding a stunting double for Tufts, a 200-pound blond. Finally the studio hired black-haired George Dockstader, sent him to a beauty parlor, had him blondined.

Alan Carney, who forms a new comedy team with Wally Brown in "The Adventures of a Rookie," had to do a sleep-walking scene ending in a terrific fall down a flight of stairs. A stunt man was requested, of course. The hardy devil who answered the call stood 6 feet, 2 inches, and was skinny as a scantling. Carney is 5-9, weighs 190 pounds.

"Babe" Does His Own

Oliver Hardy took the wickedest tumble of his lengthy career last week for a scene with Stan Laurel in Twentieth Century-Fox's "The Dancing Master." It was the old banana gag, the oldest "Pratt fall" the movies know. No stunt man could be found, so "Babe" stepped on the banana himself—with dire but highly artistic results.

Paramount couldn't uncover a stunt boy to double in a number of dangerous riding and falling scenes for 11-year-old David Leland, making his debut in "The Hour Before the Dawn." The company went to Arizona without a double. There the assistant director dug up a tough little junior high kid, who did the stunts. Said the admiring David, watching his double:

"Mommy, I don't see why they didn't get him for the whole picture. He can do anything."

Both Plans and Executes

Harvey Perry, one of the greatest of the stunting tribe, was placed under a long-term contract recently by Warner Bros. Not only does he do stunts himself, he also plans and arranges all major roughhouses.

One such was a big fight in "Saratoga Trunk." But even Harvey's influence couldn't corral sufficient stunt men. Five young stock actors had to participate, leaving the fray lame, halt and punchdrunk.

Yes, the stunt men can pretty near name their own salaries these days. They earn what they get, too. It's a rough, hard life. Still and all, to quote one of the durable brethren:

"...better than a blow in the face with a dull ax!"

Reads Want Ad—Wins Contract

Hollywood.—This may start all the young men and women in the country reading the newspaper want ad columns.

Seventeen-year-old Farley Granger was a want ad fan and look where he is today.

Recently he saw this advertisement in the want ad section: "Wanted—Boy, over 17 but not 18; theatrical experience desirable but not essential. Send photo and brief biography."

Granger sent the desired material to the box number given and the next thing he knew he had a seven-year film contract and a featured role opposite Teresa Wright in "The North Star," the Samuel Goldwyn production which RKO Radio will release shortly.

Goldwyn's casting office had inserted the ad after a futile three months' search for a promising juvenile.

Iron Major's Sons Advise Film Star

Hollywood.—There should be no complaints from the people who knew the late Maj. Frank Cavanaugh about Pat O'Brien's characterization of the famous football coach.

Two of Major Cavanaugh's sons were on the set coaching Pat during the filming of "The Iron Major."

They were Sergt. Phil Cavanaugh and Private First Class William Cavanaugh, who, because they were good soldiers, were given 15-day furloughs by the Army to advise on O'Brien's portrayal of their dad. They are but two of six sons and one daughter of the iron major now wearing the uniform of Uncle Sam's fighting forces.

Assigned to Script

Polly James has been assigned to script Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's forthcoming "Mrs. Parkington," by Louis Bromfield. Miss James joins writers Robert Thorne and Vincent Lawrence, who were earlier assigned to the story.

Nats Skid to Fourth Place as Tigers Win, 9-1

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Detroit, July 7.—There was some surprise last winter when Steve O'Neill, never a pop-off guy, suffered a sudden rush of words to the face and flatly predicted that his Detroit rookie, Dick Wakefield, would be one of the American League's five leading hitters.

POVICH

You should see O'Neill grinning these days. Young Wakefield, with the season nearing the halfway point, isn't doing badly at all. In fact, his .330 batting average is second-best in the league. Furthermore, the lad is beginning to cause talk otherwise. He can throw like blazes, and the only outfielder in the league who can out-run him is George Case.

The other day in Detroit, the Tigers and the Red Sox held a field meet between games of a double-header. Wakefield entered only three events, the 60-yard dash, the fungo-hitting contest and the race around the bases. He won the sprint, won the fungo hitting by out-batting Rudy York, but he slumped in his effort to clean up the base-running contest. He could merely tie Culbertson of the Red Sox in 14 seconds.

When O'Neill went out on a limb for Wakefield, he was not taking any shot in the dark. During 1942, O'Neill had Wakefield at Beaumont, the Tigers' Texas League farm, and he saw the big boy hit all kinds of pitching for a .345 average. You had to like him off that," says Steve. "That was a pitchers' league. Only six fellows in it hit more than .300 and there was Wakefield belting .345."

The only thing the Tiger management used to have against Wakefield was his weakness for betting. Wakefield got an expensive education in the Tigers' training camp in 1941 at Lakeland, Fla., just after the Tigers had paid him $55,000 for signing a contract. He fell in with such as Roy Cullenbine, Dizzy Trout and Buck Newsom who relieved him of some of that dough.

Wakefield overestimated himself at the pool table and went for plenty. He used to bet, too, that he could hit home runs over the right field fence at Lakeland, where nobody ever hit one before, and that's another wager he couldn't win. But he has reformed, now, and O'Neill has no complaints. Girls don't exist for him. At the start of the season, Wakefiffield cost the Tigers a couple of ball games with his failure to field ground balls cleanly, but O'Neill was tolerant. "That's something he has to learn. Shucks, don't forget the Kid was a catcher all his life until he went to Michigan. He's going to be one of this league's best outfielders by the end of the season."

The chief difficulty O'Neill has had with Wakefield is in his attempt to get the big boy to pull the ball to right field. "He was getting his hits to left and center, and everything he hit toward right was right in the hands of some infielder and outfielder. He got discouraged, but he'll get his share of hits to right if he keeps meeting the ball the same way."

Wakefield's resemblance to Ted Williams, which was marked from the first day he came to the notice of big league scouts, took on an even more amazing character in Detroit the other day. He caught hold of a ball and banged it for a home run against the facing of the third deck, exactly to the spot where Williams broke up the 1941 all-star game with his ninth-inning homer.

O'Neill was a coach with the Tigers when Wakefield got his tryout after leaving the University of Michigan in June, 1941, and he says Wakefield sold himself to the Tiger front office. "With everybody wondering what kind of a hitter he was, the boy went out there and hit a half-dozen balls into the right-field upper deck. We knew we'd never let him get away. He was a big, strong kid, then, with lots of power. He didn't take any outfield practice or run himself tired, he was just up there to hit, and he was plenty fresh."

Clyde Milan, the Washington coach, predicts that Wakefield is a sure-shot to be perhaps the best outfielder in the league in a couple of years. "You don't see big fellows as aggressive as Wakefield," he points out. "He's always on fire, willing to run and acting like a 140-pounder who had to make good on spirit. Give me that kind of a ball player."

Frankie Wills Signed To Meet Montgomery

D. C. Boy Posts $500 Forfeit to Make 145 Pounds

Maxie Starr Added To Hart-Conway Card for Monday

Frankie Wills, District welterweight champion, yesterday was signed as "Tiger Bob" Montgomery's opponent by Promoter Goldie Ahearn when the New York lightweight champion makes his first Washington showing next Tuesday, July 20, at Griffith Stadium.

The bout, a 10-rounder, has been hanging fire for over a week and was not closed out until yesterday when Bob Hayden, comanager of Wills with Bo Bregman, posted a certified check for $500 demanded by Frankie Thomas, Montgomery's manager, that Wills weigh not more than 145 pounds at 2 p. m. the day of the fight.

Wills, who whipped Al (Bummy) Davis last winter, earlier was in line for a big shot this summer, but ran afoul of R. J. Lewis, an unknown Negro from Denver, who upset the D. C. boy. Wills, at the time, had hardly recovered from a six-week illness. Since, Wills has whipped Jerry Fiorello of New York, a tough veteran who had 13 straight victories, on the Richmond Police card last month and then followed with a sensational two-round kayo over Manuel Rosa of Baltimore, with him he had previously a tough time to win an eight-round decision.

An eight-round semiwindup between Maxie Starr, North Dakota Indian, and Taffy Cummings, tough little sailor from the Royal British Navy, yesterday was added to Monday night's boxing show at Griffith Stadium featuring the two heavyweights, Al Hart, of the Army War College, and Clent Conway, Fort Monmouth, N. J., soldier.

Starr lost none of his following last month when he bowed recently to Beau Jack. His two eight-round draws with Pete Galiano were two of the best matches ever staged at the Arena.

Cummings needs little introduction to Washington boxing followers, for he made several hits in Arena matches.

Also closed out yesterday was a six-rounder in which Starr's stablemate, Frankie Maxwell, will take on Jimmy McGriff, a stablemate of Danny and Charlie Petro.

Conway's stock took a decided rise, as a result of Larry Lane's knockout over Marine Eddie Hocevar in Newark, Tuesday. Lane held Hart to a draw, while Conway came along to flatten Lane. Hocevar whipped Georgie Parks, who had knocked out the highly-regarded Vince Pimpinella.

'Angel' Wins as Groan Boys Uncover a New Hoop-de-Doo

Special! The wrestling profession (?) has a new angle. The latest production is spectacular and worked to perfection before 1000 fans at Turner's Arena last night. Here's how they operated it:

When Blustery Babe Sharkey dropped a left-handed decision to the ORIGINAL Angel after 15 minutes he then attacked Referee Buddy Litchfield, an unwitting cause of his loss, the Angel and the cherub's manager, Karl Pojello. Just as this battle was well under way, Chief Bamba Tabu and Michele Leone, a pair of the cast, rushed into the ring to take up arms against Sharkey.

The titanic Texan cleaned up the whole caboodle before being led from the scene by policemen. It was an original twist, great fun, and the crowd loved every slug of it.

Michele Leone scored a surprise victory over Ace Freeman, winning a rough semifinal with a series of slams and a press in 16 minutes.

A newcomer known as the Mask, who looks very much like old Hans Kampfer, defeated Chief Bamba Tabu with a body bend and arm scissors in 9½ minutes, and Johnny (Tripod) Long and Dr. John Bonica worked to a scientific stalemate.

Soldier Ed Pavloski defeated Allen Cherney, the Torpedo Station toolmaker, who was making his professional debut, with a body press after 14 minutes of the opener.

Pittsburgh Triumphs at Hagerstown

Hagerstown, Md., July 7.—Mrs. J. H. Elliott's 5-year-old gelding, Pittsburgh, won the Hotel Alexander Purse which featured the second day's race program at the Hagerstown track. A crowd of approximately 4000 persons watched the sport.

Mrs. E. D. Sowers' Dividend, favorite in the wagering, wilted in the Hotel Alexander after setting all the pace. Pittsburgh challenged at the far bend, after which Dividend faded to finish second, two lengths behind the winner and a like distance in front of Mrs. L. E. Crowell's Glitter Girl, which closed fast for the show money.

Pittsburgh Pays $10.60

Pittsburgh, second choice of the crowd, paid his backers $10.60, $3.90 and $3 across the board, as he finished the 6½ furlongs in 1:21 over a fast track. Dividend returned $3.50 and $2.80 and Glitter Girl paid $2.80 for $2 to show.

A. Garisto's Sweet Zaza, winner of the first race, coupled with G. A. Garrett's Mistake in the daily-double wagering, returned $236.80 for $2. Sweet Zaca's Mutel was $25, $9 and $5 and those who backed Mistake were rewarded with $10.80, $4.50 and $3.20 for $2.

Courtney Ties 'Buddy' Adair

Staff Sergt. Ralph (Buddy) Adair and Jerry Courtney battled each other to a standstill yesterday at Edgemoor Club, splitting the first two sets and deadlocking at 7—7 in the third set before darkness interrupted their Middle Atlantic semifinal singles match. Adair won the first set, 6—4 and Courtney captured the second, 6—2.

Adair, depending on speed and hard hitting and averaged a point per game in scoring aces or forcing Courtney to err in attempting a return. Adair forced the play, scoring numerous placements, but at times was erratic and was the victim of many errors. Courtney depended on spin and deception and was angling his shots nicely and was retrieving in sensational style.

The match will be continued Sunday prior to the singles final. Today's only match pits Adair and Igor Cassini against Lundgoot and Smalley in the doubles at 6 p. m.

Carrasquel And Mertz Ineffective

4-Run Fifth Ends Scoreless Tie; Nats Held by Newhouser; Ross' Bat Prominent

By Shirley Povich
Post Staff Writer

Detroit, July 7.—The only thing of consequence the Nats hit today was the skids. They got themselves held to five hits by Hal Newhouser of the Tigers and skidded into fourth place. The score was 9 to 1, which was the best the Nats could expect under the circumstances.

The only contest involved was between the Nats' pitching and their own batting order. It was a close fit, with the Washington pitching only slightly worse than the hitting. Maybe you better make it a three-way tie, because the Nats' defense wasn't so hot, either.

Anyway, the Tigers took over the second-place spot the Nats had been holding for most of two months. The Nats' Western woes (7 defeats in 10 games) started to pile up in the fifth inning today when Alex Carrasquel surrendered four runs to the Tigers to end a scoreless tie.

Fumble Fills Bases

Carrasquel invited trouble for himself when he fumbled a bunt that filled the bases full of Tigers in the fifth. Young Jim Mertz couldn't do much about stopping the Tigers and handed over their last five runs.

Newhouser and his fast ball discombooberated the Nats almost completely. He struck out 8 of them. They had only two hits until the sixth when Mickey Vernon's single and Stan Spence's double off the left field wall started and finished the Nats scoring for the day.

The gathering of 3720 scented the possibility that the Tigers mop up when Carrasquel walked Bloodworth and pitched a single to Richards before anybody was out in the sixth. Carrasquel didn't disturb that notion when with an easy play at any base he fumbled Newhouser's bunt, filling the bases with none out.

Run Cut Off

In this situation, Vernon cut off a run when he took Cramer's grounder and threw to the plate for a force play on Bloodworth. But Chet Ross got two runs home with a single to left, Wakefield fetched another with a double to left, and a fourth scored when Johnson fumbled Harris' grounder.

Mertz was a soft touch in the sixth when the Tigers upped their lead to 8-1. Bloodworth beat out a bunt, and Newhouser got a double on a ball to right field that George Case misplayed horribly. Case started in and then went back too late to make the catch. Cramer was purposely passed to fill the bases, and Ross singled two runs home. Wakefield's single to center got the third, and the fourth scored on Higgins' fly to Case.

The Tigers got their ninth run very simply. Harris simply tripled past Case, and Richards simply doubled over Spence's head.

Gerry Priddy, in a horrible slump, has now gone hitless in his last 22 times at bat. He struck out twice more today. He fanned into a double play in the fourth inning when he missed a third swing on a hit-and-run play and Bob Johnson was caught going into third. George Case was thrown out for the second time in two days by Paul Richards, Tiger catcher. Case's base stealing record now reads 24 successes in 29 tries. . . . Shortstop Joe Hoover of the Tigers pulled a leg muscle in the first inning running out a ground ball and the Tigers were forced to substitute Chet Ross. . . . All Ross did was make three straight hits and drive in four runs. . . . The Nats are now presented with the chance to miss the boat, literally. . . . They'll go to Cleveland tonight by a lake steamer. . . . Ewald Pyle has been restored to a starting role for tomorrow's opener with the Indians which will commence, for the benefit of the swing shift, at the odd hour of 11:30 a. m.

Wyatt Ordered To Give Arm Rest

Brooklyn, July 7 (AP).—Whitlow Wyatt, veteran Brooklyn pitcher, has been ordered to do no throwing for two weeks because of a lame right shoulder, the Dodgers announced today. Wyatt, who pitched to only one batter in his last mound start against the Reds a week ago, was examined yesterday by Dr. Michael Deddish. The ailment was diagnosed as a bursitis condition.

Merrick B. C. Wins

The Merrick Boys Club defeated the Hurst Playground, 6 to 4, yesterday. Al Guiffreda knocked a homer with two on base in the Georgetown League game. The contest was the opener of the second half season. Hurst won the first half race.

Three Base Running Contests To Feature War Benefit Game

Three base running contests, for outfielders, infielders and batterymen, are among the side features being arranged by the Touchdown Club for the Baseball Day benefit game between the Chicago White Sox and the Washington Nationals here on the night of July 28.

The Touchdown Club is sponsoring the game with the hope of making the crowd and paid attendance, all of which goes to war charities, the largest of the 16 games in both leagues. Eight of these games already have been played on June 30, with the $32,624.50 paid by 29,495 spectators for the Washington-Chicago game at Chicago the top figure. The other eight go on July 28.

The base running contest is only one of the side attractions. Cooperation of the American Legion has been secured through Patrick J. Fitzgibbon, department commander, who has appointed Lester H. Steinem, department athletic officer, as chairman of a committee to work up some color and pageantry for the occasion. "The major leagues were the ones who put up $20,000 for our ball and bat fund during the last war," Steinem recalls, "and we are back in the baseball boys 100 per cent now that they are doing something for the boys in this war." One-third of the proceeds from the Baseball Day game here will go to the present ball and bat fund.

One of the colorful highlights of the evening will be display of the world's largest flag which is being brought here from San Francisco especially for the occasion. It will take 300 Legionnaires just to carry it. The National Guard of Honor and the James Reese Europe Post drum and bugle corps also will take park in the Legion program.

Original plans to have a double-header baseball game with a picked team of Nats and White Sox opposing the Norfolk Naval Training Station nine before the regular game had to be dropped when it was learned that the Norfolk team could not get away for that date.

Moses Steals Home In 14th, Chisox Win

Daring Venture Pays Off, 3-2, After Two Are Out; Johnny Humphries Hurls Victory

Chicago, July 7.—Wally Moses' steal of home with the bases filled in the fourteenth inning gave the Chicago White Sox a 3 to 2 decision over the Boston Red Sox today for their eighth triumph in their last 10 games. The White Sox won the series, 2 games to 1.

Moses singled to open the fourteenth inning, went to second on a sacrifice and to third on Guy Curtright's single to short left center. Mace Brown succeeded Mike Ryba as Boston's third pitcher and walked Luke Appling to fill the bases. He then struck out Jimmy Grant and while he was pitching to Don Kolloway Moses broke for home and made it. It was Moses' eighteenth stolen base of the season.

Johnny Humphries hurled all the way for Chicago and allowed 8 hits, only one of which was made in the last 7 frames.

Reds Defeat Braves, 5 to 1, Then Bow, 4-2

By the Associated Press

Boston, July 7.—The Boston Braves and Cincinnati Reds split a double-header at Braves Field today as Elmer Riddle pitched a three-hit, 5-1 victory for the Reds in the opener and Manny Salvo squared the Braves in the nightcap with a five-hit, 4-2 victory.

Nate Andrews, who opposed Riddle in the first game, was given poor support and Riddle had no trouble in scoring his tenth win of the season after the Braves touched him up for a run in the first.

While Salvo, who had previously beaten only the Phillies, chalked up his third win of the campaign, Bucky Walters bowed for the ninth time this season as the Reds failed in the nightcap.

Charley Workman, Whitey Wietelman and Butch Nieman led an 11-hit attack on Walters while Salvo had a shutout going into the ninth. The Reds averted a whitewashing when Pinch Hitter Dain Clay doubled and Lonnie Frey singled him home. Frey went to second on an infield out and tallied when Bert Haas cracked out a single.

Moses Steals Home In 14th, Chisox Win

Daring Venture Pays Off, 3-2, After Two Are Out; Johnny Humphries Hurls Victory

Chicago, July 7.—Wally Moses' steal of home with the bases filled in the fourteenth inning gave the Chicago White Sox a 3 to 2 decision over the Boston Red Sox today for their eighth triumph in their last 10 games. The White Sox won the series, 2 games to 1.

Moses singled to open the fourteenth inning, went to second on a sacrifice and to third on Guy Curtright's single to short left center. Mace Brown succeeded Mike Ryba as Boston's third pitcher and walked Luke Appling to fill the bases. He then struck out Jimmy Grant and while he was pitching to Don Kolloway Moses broke for home and made it. It was Moses' eighteenth stolen base of the season.

Johnny Humphries hurled all the way for Chicago and allowed 8 hits, only one of which was made in the last 7 frames.

Pompion Wins As Camden's Meet Opens

By the Associated Press

Garden State Park, Camden, N. J., July 7.—Donald P. Ross' Pompion overcame the double handicap of deep mud and interference in the stretch today to win the Camden Handicap, feature of the opening day program of this south Jersey track's 50-day meeting.

With a crowd of 6521 looking on, the son of Pompey came from just off the pace three-eighths of a mile from home to overhaul the leaders entering the stretch and splash home a neck in front of Pine Tree Farm's Valdina Alpha, the betting favorite. An eighth of a mile from the finish, Valdina Alpha appeared to halfstumble and crash into Pompion, but Jockey Albert Schmidl kept his mount moving to finish the 6 furlongs in 1:13.3.

The victory, first scored by the Delaware-owned 5-year-old in nine starts since last February, was worth $490 and boosted his earnings for the year to $12,985. He returned $10.90 for each $2 win ticket, $4.60 for place and $3.40 for show. Valdina Alpha was $3.90 and $2.90 for place and show. Victor Emanual's Omission, who closed fastest of all to come from last place and finish third, paid $4.80.

Mrs. Sidney S. Zell's Unchallenged broke out of the gate fastest and showed the way until caught by

Shorey-Andrews Win Pro-Amateur With Best Ball of 61

Diffenbaugh, Capt. Greer Are Second

Worsham Shoots 70, Burroughs Has 69; Andrews Sinks His 50-Yd. Chip Shot

By Merrell W. Whittlesey
Post Staff Writer

Indian Spring Club not only supplies all the amateurs for the first pro-amateur golf tournament of the season yesterday but supplied the winning team in Pro Mel Shorey and his hat-drawn partner, Cliff Andrews, who came up with one of his best rounds of golf as he and Shorey romped home with a best ball 61, 9 under par.

At the end of the first nine holes it was simply a matter of who was going to finish second, as Andrews, a five-handicapped player and recent graduate of the public links, came up with three consecutive birdies on the last three holes to help his team to an outgoing 29.

Andrews in Form

With Andrews shooting an individual 71, using three handicap strokes to advantage, and Shorey providing the steadying influence with a 73 on his own ball, the host club team won by a pair of shots. Andrews' feats for the day also included a 50-yard chip shot into the cup for a birdie two on the eighth hole and a putt the width of the green on the eighteenth for another birdie duece as a finishing touch.

Each of the seven professionals had four partners and Kenwood mentor George Diffenbaugh finished second with Capt. H. E. Greer with nines of 31 and 32 for a best ball 63. Diffenbaugh and Greer were not playing partners but when they totaled their score at the finish it was a pleasant surprise for both. Diffenbaugh, putting badly, posted a pair of 36s for a 72.

Worsham-Burrows third

Burning Tree Pro Lewis Worsham, who shot a 30-34, 64 to win the Middle Atlantic P. G. A. title the last time he played Indian Spring, finished third with Ted Burrows, the many-time public links champ.

Worsham smacked an 8-iron shot near the cup on the eighteenth and dropped the putt for a birdie, his fourth of the day, and a 70 but Burrows outdid his pro partner with a miraculous putting exhibition which netted an individual 69, one under par and an excellent round over the wind-blown course with a long, tough rough. The best Worsham and Burrows could accomplish from a best ball standpoint was a 64. Worsham and another partner, W. B. Robinson, completed the prize list, which was payable in war bonds and stamps, with a best ball 65, Robinson coming back in 36 after an outgoing 44.

NOTES—Of the three Baltimore pros who competed, Carroll McMasters plans a tournament at his Woodholme Club early in August, on the same basis, the host club supplying all amateurs . . . Bob Barnett was a model of consistency with 16 pars out of the 18 holes . . . Mel Shorey had his second big day in a row at his home club as the women's golf committee honored him at a surprise birthday party on Tuesday . . . Roger Peacock, now employed at the Engineer and Research Corp. in Riverdale, shot a four-under 66 in his last round, and missed a half-dozen putter-length putts. Peacock plays once a week . . . Elliott Spicer, Bob Barnett's partner, reported a level par 70 yesterday . . . The small turnout yesterday discouraged several of the pros who planned tournaments at their home courses, although Bob Barnett is planning on his annual pro-senior in the fall . . . C. C. of Maryland members in Baltimore are transported from the carline to the club by a horse-drawn hook and ladder wagon long discarded by the Baltimore Fire Department.

Federal Golf Entries To Close Today

H. N. Bannister, president of the Interdepartmental Golf Association, will close entries today for the annual tournament for Federal golfers next Monday and Tuesday at Bannockburn.

Play will be over the 36-hole medal route with both days open for play. Bannister, looking for a field of 50 to 70 Government workers, will accept entries at Republic 7400, Branch 61522.

Cramer Rolling Along to Another Good Year

Veteran Playing 13th Season in American League

By the Associated Press

Detroit, July 7.—The itinerant Roger (Doc) Cramer is two weeks from his thirty-eighth birthday and not so lively as he used to be, but neither is the baseball the major leagues are using.

Consequently, the veteran Cramer, who was often cast aside by managers as a banjo hitter, is having a remarkably good season, and the Detroit Tigers are benefiting no end from his batting as well as defensive play.

Cramer, playing his thirteenth season in the American League and with his fourth club, hasn't belted a home run since 1941 and his output is 25 in a dozen years. Naturally, there is a greater demand for young men who bust down the fences, but the Tigers are high on Cramer's work.

ROGER (DOC) CRAMER

Staying close to the .300 mark, Cramer is among the league batting leaders, and there was an undercurrent of discontent at Briggs Stadium when Cramer was left off the 1943 All-Star team. He last made the grade in the dream game in 1938.

'Banjo' Hitting Proves Big Help To Detroit Team

Cramer's batting fell off nearly 30 points under his lifetime average the last two years, but the Tigers kept him in the line-up in 1942 for his defensive abilities. He possesses one of the game's most accurate throwing arms and he still has good range in center field.

Last year Cramer joined the somewhat exclusive club whose membership is limited to those with 2000 hits.

The Tigers got Cramer along with Jimmy Bloodworth from Washington two years ago in exchange for Bruce Campbell and Frank Croucher. The deal, incidentally, was one that obviously added nothing to Clark Griffith's reputation as the "Old Fox."

Broken Bones May End Career Of Don Bingo

By the Associated Press

The racing days of Binglin Stock Farm's Don Bingo, winner of the rich Suburban Handicap early this season and third in the $50,000 added Massachusetts Handicap last Monday, may be ended, a veterinarian revealed today, with an X-ray disclosure that the South American-bred colt had suffered a broken bone in each forefoot in the New England classic.

Dr. H. M. Lewis, widely known veterinarian, has attended the colt since the race on Monday.

After he informed Trainer William Post of the ailment, plans were made for shipping Don Bingo to the farm as soon as he could be moved.

Selections at Hagerstown

Dear Al,

Preedictions that Hagerstown, with its war-swollen population, could support a race meeting by itself are proving correct. Crowds and betting were ahead of last year for the first two days. I have seen a lot of public

"I see by Newsweek···

Soldiers' Influence On Congress Is Growing! Seems letters from service men and relatives played an important part in making Congress pass anti-strike bill over President's veto. Already Congress has provided service men with more benefits than the 1918 boys received until long after the war. Political observers believe the next big lobby will be service men . . . it will dwarf the influence organized labor has won in recent years!" (Note: Every week our fighting men receive "Battle-Baby"—Newsweek's miniature overseas edition.)

"I see by Newsweek···

Two Angles On the Roosevelt-Congress Dispute! Ernest Lindley says: Roosevelt is well-informed on the biggest problems facing us; Congress is not. Roosevelt is still anxious about the future; Congress is over-optimistic. Roosevelt has neglected home affairs, but Congress, in an angry mood, hasn't helped matters. On the other hand, Ralph Robey says, confusion on taxation, food production, rationing, and labor problems rests squarely on decisions made by Roosevelt and his bureaucrats!" (Note: Signed opinions by recognized authorities are regular Newsweek features.)

Are you getting the news you need these days?

ARE you tired of news that is "angled"... news that tries to lead your thinking? Wouldn't you rather have honest, objective reporting? Example: We gave you both sides of the coal miner's controversy . . . at a time when most news sources gave one side only.

Perhaps you're weary of news warmed over . . . of facts you've read again and again! Wouldn't you prefer inside information, news-meaning, news-significance? Example: Recently we revealed a behind-the-scenes story on the drafting of fathers . . . with facts that helped clarify a confusing picture!

Maybe you'd like opinions that are signed. Example: We give you the signed opinions of Lindley, Moley, Robey, Pratt, and Lardner.

Maybe you're looking for something more than yesterday and today . . . for the news that hasn't happened yet . . . the trends that will affect your life tomorrow? Example: Newsweek's "Periscope" predictions have been 88% accurate . . . and Newsweek's "Postwar Horizons" has already explored postwar U. S. bases, the postwar food problem, postwar aviation, electronics, plastics—will continue to illuminate the world of tomorrow.

This is the special service Newsweek has always given its readers. Today we are trying to carry it beyond the pages of the magazine itself.

Because of wartime restrictions we are unable to print enough copies to meet the increased demand.

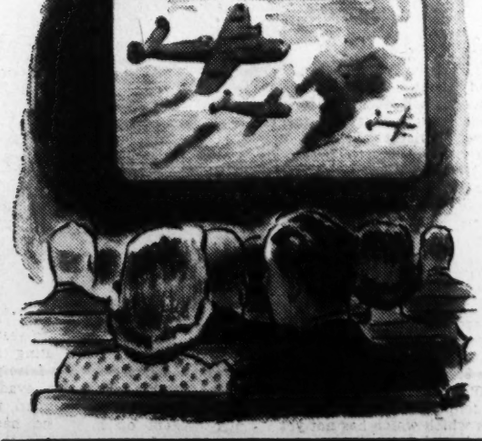
That's why we're bringing you significant highlights from Newsweek in advertisements like this.

That's why we suggest to those who do get their copies . . . share them with as many people as possible.

A well-informed public is America's greatest security.

"I see by Newsweek···

Britain's Postwar Plans Won't Conflict With Ours! According to Newsweek's Postwar Horizons Department we will both dominate world commerce because we will share vast productive capacity and the control that goes with victory. Britain must increase exports to make up for foreign investments lost in war . . . but world needs will be great enough at first to make fighting for markets unnecessary. The main difference between Britain's plans and ours is that she has already determined her postwar goals."

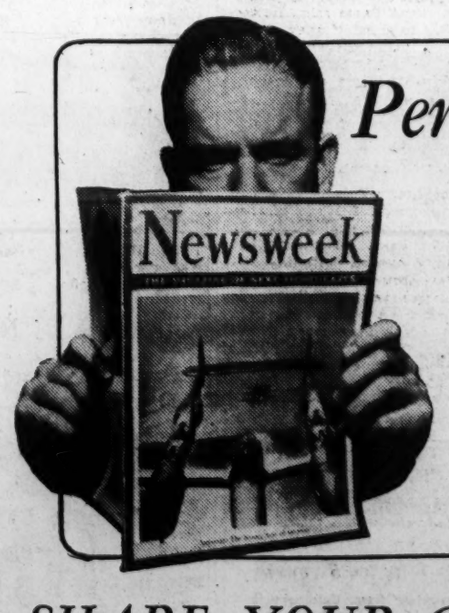


"I see by Newsweek···

Nazi Desperation Over Cracking Morale is reflected in new propaganda line which plays up suffering from Allied bombing . . . promotes hate. They've also changed from 'Fortress of Europe' line to 'Inner Fortress' line because of imminent invasion of Italy. Further evidence of cracking morale is shown in frenzied efforts of many Germans to get neutral testimony in writing that they have been 'good' Germans in their behavior towards Jews and other oppressed groups!"

"I see by Newsweek···

We Home-Fronters Can Expect . . a big new prohibition drive this year . . . fewer movies than at any time in 20 years . . . more meat by mid-summer with the possibility of the Government buying up all stocks and distributing them . . . certain other food stocks may also be sold through the Government—at a loss—to reduce cost of living and improve distribution . . . the same amount of oil despite new pipelines!"
(Important: One sure way to speed victory and good things again is to buy as many War Bonds and Stamps as we possibly can!)



Periscope predictions

April 23, 1942—Newsweek's "Periscope" predicted Finland's policy of inactive warfare which was announced in the news on July 25, three months later.

March 22, 1943—Newsweek's "Periscope" predicted that Russia would soon renew fishing treaty with Japan. Five days later the signing of the treaty was announced in the news.

April 5, 1943—Newsweek's "Periscope" revealed that the Navy was holding back, for reasons of security, good news in the Pacific.

At that time we'd taken Ellice Isles . . . announced in the news April 24!

We had occupied the Russells in the Solomons . . . announced in the news on May 5!

We had established a base on Amchitka, 70 miles from Kiska . . . announced in the news on May 8!

Every week Newsweek's "Periscope" gives you predictions, inside views, and dramatic pre-views of world events. It has been accurate more than 4 out of 5 times.

Anti-Professor Rider Threatens OPA Chiefs

It now appears that upwards of 20 policy-making officials at the Office of Price Administration will be forced out of their jobs by the anti-professor rider on the war agencies appropriation bill which forbids the payment of salary "to any person who directs the formulation of any price policy, maximum price or price ceiling with respect to any article or commodity unless in the judgment of the administrator such person shall be qualified by experience in business, industry or commerce." OPA has been pleading with Congress to amend the rider. Chances appear to be against it. Yesterday OPA officials were trying to get an interpretation of the rider and they were making plans to replace a number of their top-bracket people who would be fired summarily if the rider becomes law.

KLUTTZ

Key officials whom OPA would be forced to replace are reported to include Don Wallace, acting deputy administrator; Richard Heflebower, acting director of the food price division; Ben W. Lewis, chief of the industrial manufacturing price division; Claire Wilcox, head of the industrial materials division, and B. F. Raley, chief of the textiles, leather, and apparel division. These and other OPA bigwigs are economists and college professors. And there's no doubt that the rider was aimed at running the professors out of the price organization. However, it has been the clear-cut policy of OPA not to hire anyone to fix prices who had an interest in the articles involved. It was felt that disinterested and fairminded persons could do a better job. The effect of the rider will be to throw price control policy to industry representatives whose businesses will depend on their decisions.

Under its reduced budget, Farm Security will have to cut off from 25 to 30 per cent of its employes here and in its Cincinnati central office. It will retain all its county offices. . . . The employes in the contract unit of the finance division at the Maritime Commission will launch a new Liberty ship Saturday afternoon in the Baltimore yard of Bethlehem-Fairfield. The ship will be named George H. Pentleton, author of the original Civil Service Act. It'll be sponsored by Mrs. A. C. Waller, wife of the division chief. The contract unit won the privilege of launching and naming the vessel when its employes won the quarterly suggestion award. The employe or group of employes who make the best suggestion at Maritime are given the honor of christening a ship. . . . Incidentally, today is the last day for Federal agencies to make nominations for The Post's June Better Government Contest. The employe who makes the most constructive suggestion each month for the improvement of the Federal service is awarded a $100 war bond.

The Joint Committee on Printing will make another try at reaching a compromise on the Government Printing Office wage case. Members decided to mull over a plan presented yesterday which would raise the salaries of some G. P. O. employes. Committee Chairman Hayden has been tied up with appropriation bills and if he could be shaken loose for a few hours some decision might be reached . . . Office of Civilian Defense is turning off 125 of its employes here and about 90 in the field. The termination date is July 15. Being abolished are the organization's Service Division, office of the chief, Community War Information and the Program Services Section. OCD had to make the cuts to absorb a $1,500,000 congressional budget slash.

OPA has clamped another "freeze" on its personnel. No new appointments, transers, promotions or reclassifications can be made until further notice. Edward N. Hay, acting deputy administrator, made the freeze order retroactive to 5 p. m. Monday. The employes will be thawed out when OPA's '44 budget finally passes and the budget people figure out how much money will be available for its different offices. The organization was frozen temporarily to keep officials from making commitments. . . . Federal Communications Commission is setting up a modern personnel office for the first time in its history. Dick Carlson will head it up. He'll have absolute control over low-paid jobs.

OPA soon will announce a liberalized shopping leave policy for its employes. Supervisors will be ordered to give their employes time off in short snatches . . . Bob Smith has a similar policy in effect at the Labor Department and it's working well . . . House Republicans yesterday joined up with Senator McKellar and just about succeeded in throwing the new war agencies into politics. The McKellar rider which would have forced Senate confirmation of all employes in war agencies paid $1500 and more, was barely beaten by a vote of 176 to 174. The rider, if adopted, would be chaos on a silver platter. People already in the jobs would have to be confirmed before they could be paid. However, it's certain that the President would veto the bill. He'd be forced to.

Hey, Amos!

After 14 years of quietly sticking around home, Amos, a large black cat of 4 West Woodbine Street, Chevy Chase, Md., has wandered off. He left early Sunday morning. His owner, John L. Weaver, says shouting and whistling, etc., will not bring Amos home, since he's stone deaf.

FPHA Men Make Denial Of Charges

Two Architects Arraigned in Case Involving Fee Acceptance

Two Federal Public Housing Authority architects were arraigned before Justice Daniel O'Donoghue of District Court yesterday on charges having to do with an alleged illegal fee accepted by one in connection with approval of plans of a building company for manufacture of prefabricated houses.

George Dewey Conner of Chevy Chase, Md., filed demurrers to the indictments which charged him with seeking and accepting a $1000 fee from the Aladdin Co. of Bay City, Mich., and conspiring with Oscar Vatet, 5065 Lowell Street Northwest. Vatet pleaded not guilty to a conspiracy charge.

Conner was charged under a statute which prohibits Federal officers or clerks from accepting compensation for services in relation to proceedings in which the United States is a party, before any department, court-martial, bureau, officer, or any civil, military or naval commission whatsoever. Conner stated that FPHA is an independent agency and not one of the 10 executive departments, so that he could not be guilty of an offense.

In other cases, George B. Galliand, 42, 1401 Sheridan Street Northwest, pleaded not guilty to an indictment charging him with embezzlement of more than $25,000 from the Manhattan Laundry Co., where he was a secretary-treasurer. According to the information filed, Galliand spent much of the money on race track bets.

James F. Boyer, 56, whose address was listed as the Fairfax Hotel, pleaded not guilty to two charges of false pretenses, in connection with obtaining $480 from two women here, for whiskey warehouse receipts. It is alleged Boyer represented himself as a distillery company employe.

Sidney J. Person, 27, Negro, 735 Howard Road Southeast, pleaded innocent to an indictment which charged him with false pretenses in connection with the alleged collection of $38 from brewery employes here for what were represented as funeral expenses for a soldier killed in an automobile accident at Fort Belvoir. Person was said to have worn the uniform of an Army lieutenant in making the collections.

Rent Official Promises Aid In Hotel Cases

Servicemen or other transients overcharged in Washington hotels can expect to collect at least the amount of the overcharge if they obtain a receipt and note the name of the hotel and the number of the room.

If such information is sent by mail or taken to the District Rent Control Office, the office will follow through and collect the overcharge, Rent Administrator Robert S. Cogswell said yesterday.

Unfortunately, he said, most complaints received on "gouging" of servicemen come in weeks afterward and are sketchy as to details.

However, Cogswell said, recoveries have been made when information was presented adequatelyff

Most of the gouging, he said, takes place in small establishments. However, he declared reasonable accommodations for servicemen are widely available in Washington.

City News In Brief

Sylvan M. (Lemon) Brock, 18, Negro, was stabbed to death by a 21-year-old Negro woman yesterday afternoon in a shoe repair shop at 1303 Ninth Street Northwest.

Brock, who lived at 1102 T Street Northwest, apparently was followed into the shop, police reported, by the girl from her home across the street. She carried a paring knife and sank it into his left chest above the heart.

Precinct Detective A. B. Hitt, Second Precinct, arrested the girl, who was wearing a wig, near the scene. She was held for questioning.

To Appeal Conviction

Mrs. Carmen Beach Martin, 29, Spanish rumba dancer convicted of white slavery in the management of a "call house" which testimony showed catered to Latin American diplomats, filed notice in District Court yesterday she will appeal the case through her attorney, Harry Whelan.

Mrs. Martin was sentenced by Justice Matthew F. McGuire last week to serve 1 to 3 years in jail for the offense. Immigration authorities indicated on Tuesday they will seek to have Mrs. Martin deported when she finishes serving her sentence.

Marjorie Call Salzedo's Art Is Augmented by Her Beauty

MARJORIE CALL SALZEDO

Marjorie Call Salzedo, who will appear here in concerts Saturday and Sunday evenings, beside being the young woman who gave new significance to the saying that "the name of Salzedo is synonymous with the harp" is an extremely attractive person.

It is a tribute to her beauty and magnetic stage personality as well as to her musicianship that her own reputation has not been submerged by that of her husband, the world-famed harp virtuoso Carlos Salzedo, with whom she will appear at The Post-sponsored Starlight concerts in Meridian Hill Park.

The harp she plays is a radical departure from the traditionally ornate golden harp with its carvings and gilt paint. It, like Salzedo's, is perfectly plain maple wood with a high French finish. Salzedo is the originator of the new harp model, which is now used by leading harpists of the new generation.

Besides the numbers which Mrs. Salzedo plays with the entire ensemble, which includes the flutist, Ruth Freeman, and cellist, Ana Drittell, she plays a solo number accompanied by her husband at the piano, Ravel's "Introduction and Allegro." This work by the composer of the extremely popular "Bolero," is less flashy, but in its very subtlety more characteristic of the composer. She plays a harp duet with her husband, Mendelssohn-Bartholdy's "Spinning Wheel," a popular piano number which is far more pictorial when played by two harps. They play also Debussy's "Claire de Lune" and Rameau's "LaGaillarde" in duet.

There are approximately a thousand 55-cent seats and 800 more at $1.10 and $1.65, as well as the 200 seats which are given by The Post to workers in war agencies, and the standing room which has been arranged through the cooperation of the National Capital Parks Service for those unable to obtain seats. Tickets for the coming weekend's concerts still are available at the Cappell Concert Bureau, 1340 G Street Northwest, or may be bought at the park.

Mrs. Salzedo, like many an artist, is proud of her practicality, and cites as a case in point the practical use to which she has put her harp case. "It is constructed," she explains, "so that the harp lies against inner pads on each side to keep it from bumping against the wooden sides of the case. Between the pads and the outside of the case there is a bumper space of about 7 inches on either side. I have fitted these spaces as closets. There is enough room for eight dresses, and compartments for shoes, cosmetics, gloves and other accessories."

U. S. Recruiting

Farms Call Vacationing Employes

Federal employes who wish to spend vacations on farms and at the same time aid in the war effort should contact John Jones at the United States Employment Service office, 501 K Street Northwest, it was announced last night.

An agreement with the Department of Agriculture was disclosed yesterday by K. Vernon Banta, USES District director, whereby the employment service will fill quotas "on call" from agricultural extension agents in Maryland and Virginia seeking harvest hands.

Jones, who came to Washington from Coatsville, Pa., is in charge of recruiting, and will work at present among Federal agencies here.

"Prospective harvest hands are not required to have statements of availability," Banta said. However, it was explained if they go from one job to another they are required to notify farm agents.

Harvest workers are needed at present in camps near Annapolis and Hancock, Md., according to Banta.

$35,000 Subscribed

The Junior B'nai B'rith's latest bond drive for $100,000 has been oversubscribed by $6000, Ben Williamowsky, campaign chairman, announced yesterday

Underway for about a month, the drive was topped Tuesday night by an open-air dance at Rock Creek Park when $35,000 were collected. In the absence of a representative of the Treasury Department, who was supposed to take money off the hands of the youngsters, Williamowsky said they called upon Lieut. L. G. Purtlebaugh of the Park Police, who protected the huge amount of money until James F. Carr of the Secret Service arrived and brought the money to the Treasury.

Red Cross Ambulance

The Northeast Business Men's Association will present a field ambulance, equipped to carry blood plasma, to the Red Cross at a luncheon today at 12:30 p. m. in Art's Diner, 839 Bladensburg Road Northeast, it was announced yesterday.

Navy Yard Streetcars Rerouted

Half of the Navy Yard cars will be diverted during rush hours from Fourteenth Street to Eleventh and Ninth Streets between U Street and Pennsylvania Avenue, beginning Monday, the Capital Transit Co. announced last night.

This rerouting, which is designed to reduce transportation congestion in the downtown section, will send 19 cars along the new routing in the morning rush hours, and 21 outbound cars in the afternoon. The cars thus shifted will be numbered 51 instead of the regular 54 designation for Navy Yard cars, and will carry signs behind the windshields: "Via U and Eleventh Streets."

From the intersection of U and Fourteenth Streets the new morning route will go east on U Street, south on Eleventh to E Street, east on E to Ninth and south on Ninth to Pennsylvania, where it will rejoin the present line. In the evenings the northbound 51 cars will follow the regular line to Ninth Street, go north on Ninth to G, west on G to Eleventh and north on Eleventh to U Street.

This rerouting involved the installation of special tracks to permit the cars to turn from Fourteenth Street into U Street and cost approximately $70,000. Because it was a change in rush-hour service for the public benefit, no Public Utilities Commission order was necessary to put the new schedule into effect.

Shortage of Beef To Continue; Fish Supply Plentiful

A continued near-famine of beef in the city will continue for the next two weeks the War Foods Administration announced yesterday.

Due to the shortage of beef there is an increasingly heavy demand for pork products and as a result the supply of this meat is below the demand, merchants said.

However, a bright spot was revealed by fish dealers who said there was not only an ample supply of seafood now but that it was expected to become more plentiful within the next week. Also the supplies of fresh vegetables continues abundant.

Quinn, Scott Nominations Approved

Senate Committee Reports Favorably On Selection as Associate Judges

The Senate Judiciary Committee reported favorably to the Senate last night on nomination of Thomas D. Quinn and Judge Armond W. Scott, as associate judges of the District Municipal Court.

Judge Scott is nominated for reappointment, while Quinn is slated to fill the vacancy caused by the recent resignation of Judge Hobart Newman. Quinn is an administrative assistant in the Justice Department.

A tangle for official reporters and members of the press was presented yesterday during hearings on the appointments when Henry I. Quinn, former District of Columbia Bar president, opposed the nomination of Thomas Quinn.

The case of "Quinn vs. Quinn" developed that H. I. Quinn, a lawyer with 38 years experience, did not feel that nominee Quinn had sufficient legal experience. He paid tribute to the nominee's integrity.

Nominee Quinn said he had been a special agent of the FBI for 10 years before entering the Justice Department.

Community Chest Seeks Staff Raises

War Labor Board action allowing increases in Community Chest employes' salaries was approved in resolution yesterday by its board of trustees which at the same time determined to appeal the Internal Revenue Bureau's decision on increases for executive, administrative and professional employes. The board met yesterday in the United States Chamber of Commerce auditorium.

Col. William O. Tufts said the Internal Revenue Bureau had acted as a budget committee upon the Chest request, approving 28 requested increases partially granting 11, and disapproving 8.

At the same time Assistant Executive Director Edwin N. Lewis reported that a committee was studying the problem of a minimum work-week in Community Chest agencies.

He pointed out that not only was it necessary to increase salaries in order to retain competent help, but that it also was necessary to make allowances in working time for the "perpetual round of emergencies" to which staff members are subject and which necessitate their giving extra time at certain times of the year.

In view of salary and operating expense increases, the budget committee announced it will request a 12½ per cent increase in funds of the admissions and budget committee of the war fund. If this request is granted the Chest will receive $2,540,720 next year.

Institutional member agencies of the Chest were reelected to membership, and the Potomac Area Council of Camp Fire Girls was admitted to membership.

Herbert L. Willett, jr., announced that no change in collecting funds for war and home relief would take place in Washington next year as a result of the organization of the National War Fund, which was recently set up to handle nationally collections for foreign war relief and services to servicemen. The Community War Fund, set up last year to do the same job locally, will take over this work for the national organization.

Race Bias Charge Against Transit Co. Being Negotiated

Disposal of charges of racial discrimination against the Capital Transit Co. are expected to be effected through negotiations, Msgr. Francis J Haas, chairman of the Fair Employment Practices Committee, said yesterday

The newly reorganized committee met with E. D. Merrill, president of the transit company and his legal representative. Msgr. Haas said the committee had requested additional information which was promised for a meeting to be held two weeks hence..

The case against the company was set for June 2 originally and was one of those left unsettled by the old Fair Employment Practices Committee which was disbanded in May.

The present committee setup includes: For labor—Johnny Brophy, Milton P. Webster and Boris Shiskin: for industry—Miss Sara Southall, P. B. Young and Samuel Zemurray. Formerly operating under the War Manpower Commission the FEPC is now under OEM in the executive office of the President.

Postlude

Russian Program, Presented By Levin, Is Watergate Gem

By Ray C. B. Brown

Sylvan Levin conducts the National Symphony Orchestra in the eleventh summer concert at the Potomac Watergate on Wednesday night. Soloist: Anna Antoniades Xydis. Program: Overture to "Ruslan and Liudmila" (Glinka), Piano Concerto No. 1 in B flat minor (Chaikovski), 'A Night on Bald Mountain" (Musorgski), Prelude to "Khovanshchina" (Musorgski), Classical Symphony. Op. 25 (Prokofiev), Polovtsian Dances from "Knaz Igor" (Borodin).

Clouds so low that they veiled the Virginia hills in mist were such an apparent portent of rain last eveing that attendance at the eleventh summer concert of the National Symphony Orchestra was reduced to about 3500 auditors. The threatened downpour did not come, however, and the listeners were not disturbed in their enjoyment of a Russian program conducted by the dynamic former Washingtonian, Sylvan Levin, who was cordially received. There was a very friendly reception, too, for the resident pianist, Anna Antoniades Xydis, who made her local debut in Chaikovski's B flat minor concerto. Her success was more than one of esteem, for she has merits that deserved a less unpropitious occasion.

BROWN

While observing her proficient performance, one could discern the reasons why she had gained an European reputation as a talented Greek artist. Her technical equipment is excellent and she uses it with ease; her rhythmic sense is alert and her playing has vitality and a communicative emotional quality. There was nothing standardized in her reading of the concerto, and there was a freshness about it that was most pleasing.

To impart freshness to so familiar a work was in itself a feat, for the B flat minor concerto has been naturalized in the United States for 68 years since its first performance in Boston by Hans von Buelow. It is a curious fact that the early Americanization of this work, in the very year of its completion, can be traced to artistic jealousy. Chaikovski dedicated the concerto to Nikolai Rubinstein, who was piqued because he had not been consulted in matters of technique, and criticized it so abusively that the composer was deeply wounded. He erased the dedication to Rubinstein and substituted the name of Buelow, who was so delighted with the music that he included the new composition in the repertoire he was preparing for his American tour. Thus it happened that the concerto won popular favor in this country before it was heard in Russia.

Sylvan Levin began the concert with a breezy performance of the thoroughly nationalistic overture to Glinka's "Ruslan and Luidmila." Completely Slavic also were the dances from Borodin's "Knaz Igor" and two works by Musorgski: the fantastic "A Night on Bald Mountain," with its passages of eerie diabolism, and the serene "Dawn on the Moskva River," which was the composer's descriptive title for his overture to "Khovanshchina." No Russian traits are observable in the international classical symphony by Sergei Prokofiev, which is a very clever blending of modern idioms with the transparent texture of eighteenth century music in a patent imitation of Mozart and Haydn.

Ensemble Well Received

C. C. Cappel in cooperation with the National Capital Parks Service, presents the LeRoy-Foster-Scholz ensemble in Meridian Hill Park on Wednesday evening, July 7. Program: Trio in D minor, No. 30 (Haydn); Sonata in B minor, opus 58 (Chopin) Sonata for Flute and Piano in E minor (Bach); Seven Variations on the duet, Bei Maennern from Mozart's Die Zauberfloete (Beethoven), and La Boite a Joujoux (Debussy).

A pleasant and satisfied feeling pervaded Meridian Hill Park last night. For the tuneful program of the LeRoy-Foster-Scholz trio was all to the audience's liking and familiar music breeds no mental taxation. Indeed, the atmosphere was such that had the water of the nearby pond been deeper, the audience might have boarded a barge to be feted as was the elector of Hanover when he became King George I of England.

Each member of the trio was afforded an opportunity to display his own artistry either in solo or duet form each proving to be an artist of great finnesse. Yet their playing as a group was impressive for its skillful blending of individuality. Together they gave a sparkling performance of Haydn's D major trio No. 30 and read with much gaiety and zest Debussy's La Boite a Joujoux (The Box of Playthings).

Sidney Foster, pianist of the trio, played Chopin's B minor sonata, opus 58, and though giving an excellent performance with technical ease and temperamental flourish one might wish he had chosen an American composition instead.

Rene LeRoy and Mr. Foster played Bach's sonata for flute and piano in E minor in which Mr. LeRoy was revealed as a performer of sensitivity and finish. Janos Scholz's turn for brilliance and beauty of performance came in Beethoven's seven variations in E-flat major on the soprano-baritone duet, "Bai Maennern" from Mozart's opera, "Die Zauberfloete."

De Falla's Ritual Fire Dance from "'El Amor Brujo" and the scherzo movement from a Von Weber trio were played as encores. All in all, it was a most satisfying evening. N. F.

Seems There Are Plenty of If's In That Vacation Trip Idea

By Anne Hagner

Post Staff Writer

Memo to District motorists: Office of Price Administration red tape has your automobile tethered securely in its garage, despite national OPA's announcement Tuesday that each A card may be used for one trip to a resort after July 15.

Although all 15 local war price and ration boards have been bombarded with telephone calls from vacation-minded A card holders wanting to know if they may make plans for their allotted trips right away, no answer can be given.

It seems that all orders to District OPA must originate in Washington at the national office, then go to the regional office in New York, and finally return to local headquarters at 5601 Connecticut Avenue Northwest, before being sent to individual boards. And that takes a little time.

So, while telephones and nerves jingle-jangled simultaneously in 15 local boards, District OPA can say only that its hands are tied until the office sends along its regulations and interpretations. Offically, the local office has not even heard of the relaxation of the ban which provides that car owners deserve one trip to resorts on A-card gasoline if they apply first to their local boards for permission.

Naturally, says the national OPA edict, the resort must not be accessible by other transportation facilities — which cuts down on gas-buggy excursions to traditional vacation spots for Capital folk. The New Jersey, Delaware, Maryland and Virginia coastlines are reached easily by bus, train or boat, it was said.

Meanwhile the concession has stirred vehement protest from people who have decided against long trips, but would like to drive a mile or so for swimming, picnicking or just visiting.

The OPA explained that "we simply haven't got the gasoline to lift the pleasure ban generally. The one round trip to a vacation place was the best we could do."

Privately it was conceded that enforcement of the ban will become more difficult than heretofore as a result of the partial lifting of the ruling.

One of the questions still undecided about the plan is whether motorists will be able to drive out of the Eastern area into the West. It was explained there is no objection to driving westward, but it involved a technical difficulty in coupons, to which the answer has not yet been found.

Until midnight July 21, the cross-boundary trip will be simple because Easterners still have coupons numbered 6 in their "A" books, which are valid currently in the West. In the shortage area motorists are using No. 5 coupons and are supposed to save their 6's for use in the four months following July 21.

But in the West, after that date, gas coupons will come from a new book which which has not yet been issued, and as matters now stand a vacationing Easterner would have no way of getting one of the Western editions and hence could not buy fuel in the West after July 21. Officials are studying the difficulties and say they will reach a decision in the next two weeks.

Garden Signs Ready

That sign, "Keep Off the Grass," which you used to put on your lawn has been modernized, according to District Victory Garden Supervisor J. Morton Franklin. The new version may be had at his office, 458 Indiana Avenue Northwest.

It says. "This is —— Victory Garden Aiding in the War Effort. Be Patriotic. Do Not Molest." You fill in your own name.

Corporal's Body Found

The body of Kenneth L. Helfrich, 22-year-old corporal attached to the Army War College, was recovered from the Potomac River yesterday. He drowned Sunday in a canoeing accident.

Arrangements were being completed last night for the shipment of his body to his home in St. Louis, Mo., after the coroner, Dr. A. Magruder MacDonald, issued a certificate of accidental death.

Bill Tying Up Thousands' Pay Unsigned

Controversial Urgent Deficiency Measure Rests on President's Desk

The 143-million-dollar urgent deficiency bill still rested on the President's desk last night awaiting signature while 10,000 District employes, thousands of Federal workers and hundreds of legislative employes wondered when their delayed paychecks would be released.

Several thousand small-salaried workers in custodial and other groups have had their pay held up for more than three weeks by failure of the bill to become law. The measure, passed by Congress Saturday, was the subject of controversy because of two amendments, one providing for removal from the Federal payroll of three Government employes charged by the Kerr special subcommittee with belonging to subversive organizations, and one providing for limitation of the President's emergency fund.

Three Others Cleared

Last night the Kerr subcommittee which recommended that Dr. Robert Morss Lovett, Government secretary of the Virgin Islands; William E. Dodd, jr., and Goodwin B. Watson, both of the Federal Communications Commission, be struck from Government payrolls, cleared three other Government workers of charges of subversive activity.

In a letter to Representative Cannon (Democrat) of Missouri, chairman of the House Appropriations Committee, the subcommittee reported that there was insufficient evidence to conclude that Nathaniel Weyl and David Wahl, both of the Board of Economic Warfare, and Marcus I. Goldman, geologist with the Interior Department, are at present or were in the past associated with or were members of organizations subversive in purpose.

The three were on a large list of names of Government workers submitted to the House by the Dies Committee with charges that they belonged to subversive groups.

Kerr notified Cannon that the committee had ceased its work until November 15. While the letter did not so state, it seemed apparent that the committee decided to halt its work until learning whether the three men it found guilty would be struck from the payroll. The rider on the still unsigned appropriation bill provides that the three named in it be dropped November 15 unless appointed by the President and confirmed by the Senate.

Overriding Difficult

If the bill is vetoed by the President it might be difficult to secure enough votes in the Senate to override, since the measure, five times rejected by the Senate, passed by only a very small margin. On the hand the so-called subversive rider has been demanded by the House with huge majorities.

Meanwhile, 1206 custodial employes of the District, who haven't been paid in nearly a month, are looking around to find the pennies in the piggy bank.

Nealy 3500 school teachers, many of whom told the Appropriations Committee they must be paid to get to summer school, are still awaiting salary checks.

Six days have gone by since pay for police and firemen here became due, and thousands of clerical workers are also payless. The employes of the House missed their June 30 payday.

Former War Aide Admits Draft Evasion

Joseph L. Mathews, 30, former War Department analyst, pleaded guilty in District Court yesterday to five charges of violating the Selective Service Act by falsely stating, in his efforts to evade the draft, that his wife was ill, totally dependent on him, and had one baby in January and expected another in September.

Justice Daniel O'Donoghue referred the case to the probation officer who is to make a report on the case tomorrow.

According to the charges, Mathews informed his local draft board here on several occasions that his wife was expectant or had recently had a child. He also told them, it was said, that his wife was ill and that he was supporting her, her mother and his own.

FBI spokesmen said they checked his statements with his wife who stated she had never had a child, was not ill, was supporting herself and her mother, and worked for the Government it was said. She completed the evidence, FBI said, with the assertion that she had been separated from her husband for more than six months.

Mary Haworth's Mail

With No Rights and Few Privileges Under Despot Husband's Stormy Rule, Wife Is Forced to Think Of Separation, and Finds the Prospect Unbearable

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Three years ago I married a man to whom I had been engaged in my youth and had not seen for many years. I felt we had a great deal to build on, plus a need of each other; and that the lessons learned by experience had prepared us for a happy comradeship that would develop into real love. It wasn't long before I realized, however, that his characteristic temper and bad disposition were unchanged. Being of even disposition myself, I have allowed him to dominate our home and manner of living so that I have no rights and few privileges of my own. I love peace and order to such an extent that I have taken all the unpleasant scenes without fighting back.

He professes to love me; yet when I am ill (as I have been recently with nervous collapse), he shouts at me that my only trouble is wanting someone to make a fuss over me; and baby me. There are certain things in our home I am not allowed to touch. For instance, I am very fond of good music and have a few fine recordings; but am not allowed to use the record-player. I must wait until he can play them for me. He doesn't allow me to use the car or touch his personal effects,—even to keeping his desk in order. He has been so discourteous to my friends and few remaining relatives that they no longer come to see me, although I entertain his relatives frequently and like them. He is not popular with our neighbors and has no friends.

Physician Told Her To "Forget" Distress

At times, perhaps for a few weeks, he will be quite nice and companionable;—but he is never affectionate, because he knows I would like him to be. Then, without the slightest reason so far as I can see, he will burst into a rage,—sometimes throwing things and accusing me of doing and saying things I have never done or said. I once talked with my physician about some of the experiences I had been through and he asked me to have my husband come in for an examination. This I managed to do, after months of diplomatic persuasion. The result was,—The doctor gave him a clean bill of health and told me to "Go home and forget about it."

My husband's personality is so much stronger than mine that I am actually afraid of him. We have a very nice home; and I take great pleasure in keeping it nicely. I am a good cook, have average good looks and keep carefully groomed. My husband is very good looking and neither drinks nor smokes. The thought of separation is very difficult to face. First, because I have real love for him; and, second, because having a home for the first time in my life means so much to me.

I have tried talking things over calmly with my husband; but each time he manages to turn the tables on me, by accusing me of being the cause of all disharmony and even of his dislike for his work. Very recently, he threatened to give up his position and go where I would never find him. If I were a nagging wife, this might be understandable. But I assure you that I am not. I am so confused and disturbed by the situation that I cannot think clearly. I would deeply appreciate any suggestion you can give. E. B. W.

Can Ease Situation By Accepting Reality

DEAR E. B. W.: You can ease this situation only by achieving a personal, adult "working" reconciliation to certain plain facts. Much of your unhappiness is due to rebelling against reality;—as though by rebelling against it, or shrinking from it, or thinking (sufferingly), "It shouldn't be so," you could somehow beat the cards. First, accept the fact that your husband IS a moody, defiantly undisciplined, sometimes deliberately disagreeable individual, who is neither likable nor truly lovable, in the final analysis.

Second, accept the fact that, for certain reasons (mostly dependent or self-seeking in character), you DO care for him,—as a physically personable "man in your life"; as a "good provider"; as a general and present prop against the feminine nightmare of manless insecurity and loneliness. Third, accept the fact that you are willing to put up with his "worst," as the price to be paid for his "best," rather than scrap the thorny relationship,—provided you can stand the strain of "bearing and forbearing" year in and year out.

Fourth, after fully and unflinchingly "accepting" that triple dose of unvarnished truth about the situation, stop pitying yourself for having to cope with this particular assortment of odds; stop, also, emotionally "condemning" your husband for being what he is (and you have been doing this emotionally, although doubtless not verbally). And, furthermore, stop yearning poignantly for his "reform." I advise you, in fact, to give up hope that he will change,—of himself. You can only expect him to change in relation to you, to the extent that you change, genuinely and radically, in relation to him!

Seems to Forget That She's Adult

Fifth, make up your mind (and keep ever before your mind, calmly and clearly, without either sniveling or braggadocio) that you are an adult, at least by surface standards; and that as an adult, you are your husband's co-equal and full partner in conjugal alliance,—and not in any sense his slave, his puppet or his creature; constrained by inferior status to walk a chalk line at his querulous bidding. Then suit your actions to the "imaged" truth of your co-equal status, by proceeding to behave in an adult manner. This means leaving off ignominious cringing and craven appeasing. It means deliberately expelling from mind and nerves any "fear" of what he might do when displeased,—either to you, by way of ear-splitting tirade or fretful cuffing; or about leaving you, as he recently threatened.

It means, above all, rising spiritually above your chronic "whipped dog" attempts to curry a show of affection from him. I judge your past behavior toward him has smacked, for the most part, of wistful belly-crawling,—which would only provoke his contempt and distaste. So long as you lack the moral firmness and emotional self control to deport yourself with dispassionate indifference toward him, during and after his taunting tantrums, you cannot expect him to respect you; and lacking his respect, you cannot expect him to court your favor or sue your affections, by acting the part of devoted companion.

Should Act Her Age And Compel Respect

You speak of suffering "nervous collapse" and complain that your husband derides it as an indirect bid to be "babied." In that he is cruelly right. When you summon the courage and employ the wisdom to act your age and compel respect, letting the chips fall where they may; and have done with playing the "broken woman," you will find (1) that life with him is easier to bear; and (2) that his attitude toward you is changing for the better. Care for Furnaces Now, Warns Expert

Women who had to cope with furnaces for the first time last winter are advised to have their furnaces or stokers placed in starting-up condition now.

"Early cold spells often come very unexpectedly," warns Luther Harr of the United States Bituminous Coal Consumers' Counsel. "Therefore the woman on whose shoulders has fallen the running of the furnace should take advantage of the nonheating season to have the heating plant cleaned and, if necessary, repaired. Otherwise the heating plant may not operate efficiently or satisfactorily when a fire is started next fall."

Do Not Handle Sick, Stray Dogs

By Logan Clendening, M.D.

We hear from several sources that the stray dog situation has created a condition of alarm in some communities. If the stray dog situation is as bad elsewhere as it is in my own locality, I don't wonder that it might be the cause of concern. Owners who cannot get meat or cannot afford meat or dog feed and are too kind hearted to do away with the dogs simply dump them out some place. The Union Depot in my home town has had a succession of stray dogs sleeping in the lobby for the last six months.

A general practitioner in a smaller town nearby says that there is really an epidemic of hysteria over hydrophobia on account of the stray dog situation and suggests that a word from a physician or public health official would help to clarify the situation. He says that he knows of more than 50 people who are taking the Pasteur treatment as the result of having been near two pups—and the pups did not have hydrophobia.

Two or three things can be said very definitely. In the first place, hydrophobia is a rare disease even among dogs. Just because a dog is a stray or nervous or bad tempered is no reason to think that he is carrying hydrophobia. It is even rarer in human beings.

Only about 30 per cent of dogs who are actually bitten by another mad dog develop rabies. And if 100 people were actually bitten by a rabid dog so that the virus entered the skin, only about 10 per cent of them would become infected.

In the second place, in order for infection to occur the skin must be broken and infective material from the dog's saliva enter the wound. The skin, of course, is usually broken by the dog's bite. But here again there is a sort of preventive instituted by nature, because when the saliva is heavily infected, the dog has usually reached the paralytic stage so that his jaw muscles are paralyzed and he cannot bite.

Some people have exposed themselves by petting a sick dog when they have an open cut and the dog's saliva has drooled on this cut. Here is another piece of common sense which points toward prevention, which is: do not handle stray, sick dogs. In fact, do not handle a sick dog at all even if it is your own until you know what is the matter with it.

Still another piece of comfort is that even if infection occurs in a human being, prevention is pretty certain with the Pasteur treatment. This treatment can be begun even several days or weeks after the bite has occurred and still be perfectly effective. A full course of this treatment reduces the possibility of the disease developing in a person who has been bitten by a mad dog from 10 per cent, as mentioned above, to less than one-half of 1 per cent.

Local treatment of the wound is also advisable—opening it up, draining it and cauterizing it.

This is not meant to minimize a hazard in a foolish way. Naturally the stray dog should be handled by the public health authorities and probably in the present state of the dog food problem it is humane to do away with them. But with our present scientific knowledge, the actual danger can reasonably be minimized.

The proper procedure in anyone who is exposed to a bite of a dog which may be rabid is to have the dog sent to a veterinary, killed, and the brain examined under the microscope. This certainly determines whether the animal has hydrophobia or not After that there is time to decide whether to take the Pasteur treatment or not.

THE GENTLER SEX

JULY

July is the longest month of the year (unless you happen to possess a tropical temperament). It has no soft, lingering vestiges of spring, no exhilarating whispers of fall. It holds no promise of "cooler nights," no comfort that "summer is about over." It is straight, unabashed heat and humidity, pure summer in all its maturity and lushness.

It is a month in which flies drive you from park benches, caterpillars drop on you out of trees, insects buzz around your porch lights, bees on the make torment you at lawn fetes, and strange little bugs are always being discovered on the back of your neck.

It is the time when the first big offensive of the insects, the worms and the weeds must be met in back yard gardens by tired men who have worked all day in hot offices; when housewives must stand over hot kitchen ranges cooking and canning; when office workers must spend their evenings over ironing boards; when children develop sunburn and discover poison ivy and bring home pet snakes and get involved in back yard fights; when nerves are frayed, and tempers are short, and the martyr complex ripens along with the tomatoes.

It is the month when women give up trying to look chic or smart and, if they have been in Washington a couple of summers, put on the little cottons that look like housedresses and Southern belle hats, and face their New York friends without apology; when men in shapeless summer suits and slightly soiled white shoes go around mopping their brows; when no matter what you wear you soon look as if you had just been through a river baptizin'.

No, July is not a month that poets celebrate, or that brides ordinarily favor, or that anyone particularly loves. And yet—

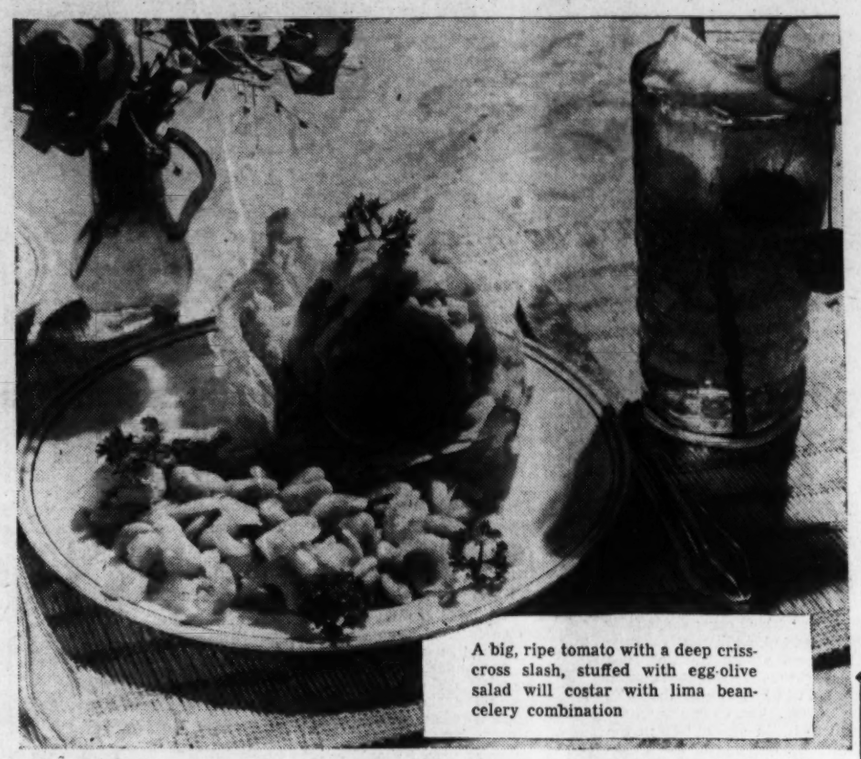
It is a time of growth and ripening; a time when summer graciously begins to offer her harvest; when the garden begins to repay for all its trouble, and housewives can boast of having their "own" tomatoes and new potatoes; when fresh cherry pies put husbands in the mood for being broached about the current fur sales; when fried chicken is at its best (for those who have country relatives), and when the early peaches and summer apples hold tantalizing promise of what lies ahead.

It is a month when a long, cool drink tastes like Olympian nectar; when a chocolate ice cream soda has the heavenly taste it did when we were children; when a shade tree at the corner where we wait for a bus or streetcar becomes an intimate personal friend; when a cooling thunderstorm at the end of a sweltering day brings an elation that is a little sip of Paradise.

It is a month without whimsies or guile or false promises; one in which you know just where you stand, a robust straightforward month that challenges the strong and ruthlessly exposes the weaklings and the whiners; a month that like January makes no compromise and that now offers a testing to those Americans who can no longer flee its lusty passion to hide in the beach surf or the mountain lodges, but who in the home trenches must face it head-on—and take it.

It is a month of importance in the Nation's historic past and also in its crucial present—a month in which momentous military adventuring is getting under way abroad, and one in which Americans at home pursuing their routine wartime tasks may have the privilege of sharing with the men who fight in hot and humid climes, their sweat, if not their blood.

Martha Ellyn's Platter Chatter



A big, ripe tomato with a deep criss-cross slash, stuffed with egg-olive salad will costar with lima bean-celery combination

Martha Ellyn

Are you a person who must hurry home from business, Red Cross, AWVS, or other activities and make ready the evening meal? You certainly welcome short cuts to meals if you do not have much time for preparation.

Quick-frozen vegetables which cook in jig-time can cut down the preparation of a meal. They don't have to be cleaned and made ready for cooking. When you take them from the carton you can pop them into boiling water. Another good point about them is that there is no refuse to be carried to the incinerator or refuse pot.

These easy-to-prepare vegetables can be the hot spot on your otherwise cold menu. Let's plan a dinner using a box of the quick-frozen lima beans:

Dinner Menu

Assorted Cold Cuts
Horseradish Sauce
Lima Beans With Celery
Stuffed Tomato Salad
Hard Rolls
Lemon Chiffon Pie
Iced Beverage

The combination of lima beans with celery is equally as appealing as succotash which combines corn and beans. Here is the way you prepare a 12-ounce box of quick frozen lima beans:

LIMA BEANS WITH CELERY

Drop the contents of 1 12-ounce box of quick-frozen lima beans and 1 cup sliced celery into 2 cups salted boiling water. Bring again to a boil and boil, uncovered, for 16 to 18 minutes or until just tender. Drain. Season with salt, pepper and 3 tablespoons butter or margarine. Serve garnished with chopped parsley. Serves six.

TOMATOES FILLED WITH EGGS AND OLIVES

Prepare 6 tomato cases. Peel, then chop 4 hard-cooked eggs. Combine with ½ cup ripe olives, pitted or stuffed olives. Add salt and pepper. Fill tomato cases with mixture. Decorate tops with chopped parsley or chives. Serve with mayonnaise. Makes six servings.

Your Figure, Madame!

By Ida Jean Kain

A thick waistline is no help to any figure. It makes the short, stocky girl look chunky, the large framed girl heavy-set, and the normal weight settled.

Waist duffel is fiendishly easy to collect, too. As soon as a girl is old enough to feel she has to be on her dignity, she gives up all the stretching and turning games and sports that kept her midriff muscles firm, and the trouble begins.

You may be one of the exceptions. You may enjoy some sport so much that you keep right on playing at it once or twice a week. But the odds are against it. And first thing you know, you are lucky to have a waist measures 7 inches less than the bust. That isn't too bad and you go along until your waist measures only 6 inches less, and by the time you are in your 30's, it may be down to 5 inches. When the difference is that little, you don't have a figure because your proportions depend on the middle measurement. If you want to improve in a hurry, get to work trimming down through the waist.

You have a nice array of muscles through this section and by giving them just a little daily exercise you can retrieve your waist and cut a nicer figure in two weeks. That is all the time it takes to lose 1 inch. You can keep right on at that rate until you are back in line. Here are exercises that turn the trick.

1. Position: Standing erect, hands down at sides, feet together.

Movement: Raise arms high overhead and at the same time step backward with one foot, pointing toes hard. Hold that position while you get a good stretch through the middle, then repeat with the other foot back. Extending the leg increases the pull on the waist muscles, but you can do even better by turning the shoulders and upraised arms to the left when you step back with the right foot, and to the right when you step with the left foot. Try to keep the hips squarely to the front as you take this extra turn—otherwise, let it go. Continue the exercise for 20 counts.

2. Position: Sit on the edge of a straight chair without arms, legs straight out in front, feet on floor and wide apart.

Movement: Pull up and in with the lower abdominal muscles, fling arms up at sides, shoulder height, twist, and bend over to touch right fingers to left toes. Sit up, and bend to touch left fingers to right toes. Keep it up for 10 counts and relax.

3. Position: Lying on back on floor, arms straight out on floor at sides, legs straight down.

Movement: Keep the legs together and turn from hips until right thigh is resting on floor. Do this without letting upper back come off floor. Come back to position and twist to rest left thigh on floor. Repeat slowly and stretchily, five times on each side.

4. Position: Lie on your back on the floor, both legs stretched out. Bring one leg up so the knee touches the other, as illustrated here by Rabana Hasburgh of the world famous Radio City Corps de Ballet. Return it to the floor, then bring up the other leg. Alternate.

5. Position: Lie face downward on the floor (with your face in a pillow if you like). Raise one leg high in the back, then the other.

Drain Heater Tank

Drain your water heater tank regularly to keep it clean and running smoothly. Open the drain faucet and let it run until the water is clear. This removes rust, sediment and all deposits which otherwise will collect at the bottom of the tank.

MUSKRAT QUIZ

By Ruth Gregory

SCENE: Almost anyplace furs are sold.

CHARACTERS: Woman, Salesman.

WOMAN: (fingering mink-blended muskrat coat). How much wear will I get out of a muskrat?

SALESMAN: Madame, that depends on the kind of care you give it. I'd say a minimum of three years, a maximum of ten.

WOMAN: Why is this fur cheaper than Persian lamb or mink? (She thinks anything that costs less is inferior).

SALESMAN: (hemming-hawing), Why, it's the old business of supply and demand. Muskrats are a hardier animal, more plentiful. They thrive all the way from Alaska and Labrador down to Louisiana.

WOMAN: Is there any difference between the quality of a northern muskrat coat and one from, say, Louisiana?

SALESMAN: Naturally, the Northern animal, because of climate, has a richer, heavier fur.

WOMAN: You said this one was made of "backs." What's the difference, except for price, in this and the one you said was "flanks?"

SALESMAN: Madame, it's obvious. See how long and glossy this one is compared to that.

WOMAN: (doubtfully). But they'll wear just the same, won't they?

SALESMAN: It stands to reason that the long-haired wears best.

WOMAN: (cautiously). You said they were "blended" . . . what does that mean?

SALESMAN: (patiently). It means that each separate muskrat pelt is feather-brushed with dye; the body of the coat isn't just dumped into a vat to come out all the same monotone of color. That's why this blended coat has varying tones, why it has a mink-like look.

WOMAN: (dubiously). Do you think this style looks good on me?

SALESMAN: (with a flourish). Madame, try it on. (He helps her into the Tuxedo-styled coat, as sketched). You'll see this same design in the most expensive furs. You can wear the panels open, or (he folds them, fastens one panel over the other), wear them closed for double warmth. Look at that five-inch cuff for turning back.

WOMAN: The shoulders are nice; I'm so sick of those bulky, football shoulders. I like the sleeves too; they're graceful, plenty of room.

SALESMAN: Look at that back!

WOMAN: (happily). It is nice, beautiful lines.

SALESMAN: You can wear it with everything, go everywhere . . . We can keep it for you until you're ready . . .

News of the Women's Clubs

By Genevieve Reynolds

In an all-out effort to reach and convince millions of people throughout the United States that international cooperation is essential to our national existence, the National League of Women Voters is conducting a summer round-up campaign among its 50,000 members in 34 States. These will be mobilized to stage a drive throughout the Nation.

GENEVIEVE REYNOLDS

As a groundwork for the campaign, the league will hold two training schools this month—one in Washington, the other in St. Louis. Leaders from the East and Middle West will be indoctrinated in the techique of awakening a sense of responsibility in people about international affairs. No town or village will be overlooked.

Miss Marguerite M. Wells, president of the National League of Women Voters, will conduct both schools. Pupils will be women who, already trained in league work (some are members of the national board, some are State league officers, are setting out to learn to train others. Immediately following the training, picked women will visit practically every State where there is a League of Women Voters, and in turn train the State board members and the local league presidents.

Miss Wells is convinced the circle will be ever widening with each member of 600 local leagues spreading the gospel that must awaken Americans to the fact that our relations with other nations after the war are their concern.

"It is the purpose of the League of Women Voters," Miss Wells said in announcing the summer roundup, "to develop a knowledge and understanding of the essentials of an adequate foreign policy for the United States. Only by building such a solid foundation can we be certain that a sound postwar plan will have the backing of the public necessary for its adoption and vital to its success.

"The 50,000 members of the league constitute an army we cannot, with a clear conscience, fail to mobilize to go among the people and exorcise them of their delusions that this country is or has been isolated from the dangers of war to which all the world is exposed.

"It is a battle we must fight upon the streets and on the beaches and in the homes," she declared. "For that is where the people are to be found in summer—millions of them, millions who will help make the decisions about 'after the war.'"

July 8 and 9 are the dates set for the training school here. Mrs. Harris T. Baldwin, Mrs. J. S. Schramm of this city, Mrs. K. P. Vinsel and Mrs. George Roudebush of Silver Spring will be among those attending. From out of town will come Mrs. John P. Cunningham, New York, and Mrs. Richard Field, Weston, Mass.

War Mothers Meet

Victory Chapter of the War Mothers of America, organized by Mrs. Anna T. Hodgkins, received its charter from Mrs. Elizabeth Martin, national president, July 2, at the home of Mrs. Marian E. Hense. Mrs. Walter Criswell, the State president, presided and installed the officers: Mrs. House, president; Mrs. Helen A. Oliver, first vice president; Mrs. Nicrotia C. Rogers, second vice president; Mrs. Mamie T. Wright, treasurer; Mrs. Sophia E. Cox, recording secretary; Mrs. Marie A. Keyser, historian; Mrs. Irene I. Howe, custodian of records; Mrs. Sarah A. Bombardier, chaplain, and Mrs. Margaret Seiler, sergeant at arms.

Eight-Forty Initiation

District of Columbia Eight and Forty, Salon Departmental, will hold mass initiation for new candidates July 21, 8 o'clock, at the Washington Hotel. The initiation will be performed by Mrs. Mary B. Corwin, Chapeau Departmental, with Mrs. Helen Ware, Demi Chapeau Premiere; Mrs. Vesta Rodruck, Demi Chapeau Dieuxeme; Miss Emily Carey, L'Aumonier; Mrs. Myrtle Spudis, L'Archiviste; Mrs. Virginia McCarthy, child welfare chairman; Mrs. Marie Totten, ritual and regalia chairman; Mrs. Edith Warren Quinn, partnership chairman, and Mrs. Ellen Louise Warren, la secretaire.

Mrs. Rae R. Zaontz, La Surintendante, will lead the new partners in the ceremonial. They are Mrs. Estelle Black, Mrs. Frances Cassedy, Mrs. Ann Gramling, Mrs. Margaret Hammer, Mrs. Hilda Hubbard, Mrs. Ola D. Lee, Mrs. Ruth Latta, Mrs. Jerry Love, Mrs. Adelaide Miller, Mrs. Kate Mills, Mrs. Wanda Piersol, Mrs. Dorothy Redfield, Mrs. Lillian Sawyer, Mrs. Amelia Sellinger and Mrs. Edna Wright.

The annual wreck for these new candidates will be held at the Palisades Field House on July 31, with Mrs. Zaontz conducting the wreck. The fun and fellowship committee, under the direction of Mrs. Della Luther, chairman, will hold a picnic supper immediately following.

The eighteenth annual marche (department convention) will be held at the Washington Hotel August 18 and 19. Mrs. Ellen Louise Warren will be general chairman.

Red Cross Offers Nutrition Course To Homemakers

A nutrition course specially designed to help housewives cope intelligently with wartime food shortages and the point-rationing system will be given by the D. C. Red Cross. The course is scheduled to begin on July 13 in the air-cooled building of the Washington Gas & Light Co., at Eleventh and H Streets Northwest. Classes will be held on Tuesdays and Thursdays from 9:45 to 11:45 and will continue for a minimum of six weeks. For further information call REpublic 8300, Extension 360.

Your Baby and Mine

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

Once the child has established good habits of eating, good toilet and sleeping habits, their abandonment bewilders the parent.

She cannot imagine why Ellen, who has been feeding herself so ably, suddenly should demand to be fed. Why has Freddy, who was exemplary in his toilet habits, now become completely uninhibited and set against everything related to the toilet? Why should Bob, who slept calmly through the night at 2 now, at 3, be waking once or twice at night?

There may be special and recognizable reasons for any of these temporary types of conduct which are plain to anyone. A new baby in the family, visitors in the home, a short illness, a change of home or room might be temporarily upsetting to the child's routine.

But just as often there is nothing discernible which would seem to motivate such conduct. It may be only the normal pattern of habit growth. A habit may seem to be established, then it is completely disrupted, then it is established again.

A day by day record of the child's behavior would indicate plainly all habits follow such uneven courses. Nothing, positively nothing in childhood, remains unchanged. Each six months of life shows some alteration in the child's behavior and these fundamental habits are no exception.

While every parent should endeavor to keep habits functioning smoothly, she should not be too discouraged when there is a disruption of them. It does not mean that Ellen will have to be fed from now on, indefinitely nor that Freddy will never again be responsible for his toilet behavior or Bob sleep through the night.

Help Ellen again. Try counting one when you give her a spoonful and two when she has taken one herself. She will be delighted with this one-two chant and may eventually want to wield the spoon at both one and two. Then step out of the picture again.

Freddy will have to be reminded that he is to ask for attention, though his temporary accidents cause no scolding. Provided personal attention to see he has an opportunity to go to the toilet when success will be most probable and eventually he'll be a model of toilet cleanliness again.

As for Bob. Is he sleeping too long in the afternoon or going to bed too early? Children need alterations in their sleeping habits—also their diets. If all of these are checked and found faultless, go to Bob when he calls, sure that in a week or so he'll be back on his old schedules again and all will be serene on the home front.

Our leaflet, "Renewing Good Toilet Habits," suggests ways of encouraging the child in a resumption of old habits. It may be had by sending a 3-cent stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request to Myrtle Meyer Eldred in care of this newspaper.

Collection of Capital Cameos

If you've been wondering, as I have, why some members of the British navy have straight stripes on their uniforms, while others have wavy ones, and still others the criss-cross kind, Comdr. Kenneth Downey, of the British Embassy's joint liaison department, can put you straight as he did me.

In his own amusing way, he deftly outlined the distinctions at a party given the other afternoon by Wing Comdr. and Mrs. John Norton. I noted that while the stripes on his own uniform were wavy, those on Capt. Val Godfrey's were straight; and I also recalled having seen criss-cross stripes worn by several British naval officers. Why the difference, I wanted to know.

"It's all very simple," said Comdr. Downey. "You see, the men who wear the straight stripes (regular navy) are sailors and gentlemen. The men in the wavy NAVY (volunteer reserves) are gentlemen trying to be sailors; while those who wear the criss-cross stripe (merchant marine) are sailors trying to be gentlemen."

"Which Side's It On?"

Two soldiers on furlough were trying to cover all points of interest in Washington. Approaching an officer of the law, on Pennsylvania Avenue, they inquired the way to the Department of State.

"Could you tell us," asked one soldier with a gesture toward the street, "which side the State Department is on?"

"We're not sure yet," solmnly answered the cop, "but we hope it's on our side."

Like a noontide haze a sense of near-exhaustion seemed to settle over a certain dinner party shortly after its members arrived at the Shoreham Terrace the other evening. Everybody was tired and talking about it, when a friend from a table across the terrace coasted over and invited all the guests to join his group.

"I'm afraid I can't," replied Mrs. Ermund Randolph of New York. "I've just arrived from Wyoming . . . and I'm tired."

"I can't either," added Comdr. A. G. Davenport. "I've just come by bomber from Puerto Rico . . . and I'm tired."

"And I'm darned tired," put in H. P. Shackelford, another member of the party. "I've just come all the way out of the Pentagon Building."

Greenest and prettiest rows in the victory garden at Charmain Manor, the Pennsylvania estate of Col. and Mrs. W. S. Culbertson, are those in which the owner planted some seeds given him by Turkish Ambassador Munir Ertegun. They're supposed to be a very special type of Turkish bean, but while the leafy plants are now a couple of feet high, neither blossom nor bean has appeared.

"I'm beginning to think they're something like Turkey's foreign policy," observed Col. Culbertson to the Turkish Ambassador the other day. "There's no telling how they'll turn out."

"No matter how they turn out," Envoy Ertegun came back, with a smile, "I've managed to get a little Turkish propaganda into American soil . . . and that's something."

All the Latins know it, of course, but there's just a chance a number of other persons besides me never have learned in full that Good Neighbor glass-lifting line which begins "Salud."

From ace writer and editor J. P. McEvoy, who dropped by Washington after a writing jaunt to Havana, I learned the entire toast the other day. It goes as follows: "Salud y amor, y pesetas . . . y el tiempo gustarlas." (Health, and love, money . . . and the time to enjoy them.)

Rather Read Than Drink

Guadalcanal seems to be one place where every man in uniform had rather read than drink—even the best of liquor.

Comdr. Luis de Florez of the Bureau of Aeronautics found that out not long ago when, on a trip to the United States base there, he took along some choice bottles of whisky, wrapped in newspapers.

The boys pounced upon the package, carefully took off the covering, and then set the bottles aside. Not one in the room touched the liquor until he had read every word of the newspaper.

Commander de Florez made a mental note of that; decided to do something about it. So, shortly after he returned to Washington, orders were issued that all items sent out to the armed formes from the Navy Bureau of Aeronautics' Special Devices Section should be wrapped in newspapers—several thicknesses, too.

Speaking of drinking—or rather, not drinking—a newspaperwoman, riding in an elevator of the National Press Building the other day, overheard this bit of talk:

Said one man, "We dropped in for a sandwich at a downtown bar the other day, decided not to take time for a cocktail, ordered a sandwich—and guess what happened."

"Well, what did happen?" obligingly asked his companion.

"When the bill came, we saw an extra charge for 50 cents. We asked the waiter what that was for. His reply: 'That's for not drinking.'"

Mexican Film Authority, Expert From Uruguay Here

Francis J. Macin Comes on Business; Former Minister of Finance, on Official Invitation

Current good-neighbor visitors to the Capital are Francisco J. Macin, Mexican motion picture expert, and Dr. Pedro Cosio, former Minister of Finance of Uruguay.

Senor Macin, who is secretary for international affairs of the Mexican National Moving Picture Syndicate, is here on a business trip connected with the purchasing of photographic material for the Mexican film industry. He believes that the production of his country's motion pictures is not only increasing, but is also gaining in quality.

"Mexican films are especially welcome by those illiterate or semi-illiterate populations of Latin-American countries who can neither read nor understand the dialogue of foreign motion pictures," Senor Macin said at a recent interview in the Pan American Union. "Our production fills, therefore, a definite need."

The syndicate of which Senor Macin is secretary is divided into 45 sections, has 10,000 members and includes not only the workmen who do the actual manufacturing of the motion pictures, but also the artists, writers, actors and distributors of the films, besides the employes of all the movie houses on Mexican territory. He will take advantage of his short stay in this country to talk with some of the United States workmen's associations. He is himself the secretary for Technical and Economic Affairs of the Mexican Workmen's Confederation.

Dr. Cosio arrived in Washington last week, delegated by his government to accept the invitation of the Treasury Department extended to a Uruguyan financial expert. He is here to take part in the preliminary sessions to constitute an international stabilization fund.

The preliminary sessions he has come to attend are to be followed eventually by a conference of the ministers of finance of the United Nations, at which the stabilization fund will be constituted. Purpose of the fund will be to avoid in the postwar a repetition of the financial upheaval that followed the first World War.

Joseph Borda To Bring Bride To Washington

Upon the completion of their wedding trip, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Louis Borda will make their home in Washington, where the bridegroom is serving as secretary to the Joint Economy Committee.

Their marriage was an event of last Saturday at St. Patrick's Cathedral in New York. The bride is the former Miss Helen McNamara, daughter of Mrs. Cornelius D. McNamara and of the late Mr. McNamara of that city.

The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Henry Gebbhardt and was followed by a nuptial mass. Escorted by her brother, Cornelius McNamara, the bride wore a gown of white lace and short finger-tip length veil held with a Juliet cap. She carried a bouquet of stephanotis and orchids. Miss Margaret Johnson, was the bridesmaid. Charles L. Borda was his brother's best man and ushers were John Bagley, George Moore, Benjamin Simmons and Elmo Cecone. A reception followed at the Waldorf-Astoria.

The bride was educated at the Cathedral School in New York. Mr. Borda attended the University of Notre Dame and was graduated from St. Bonaventure's College. He received his law degree from Georgetown University and his LL.M degree from there in 1938, after which he completed graduate studies in economics and political science at the Brooklyn Institute.

Brazilian Colonel Entertains

The chief of the Brazilian Military Mission, Colonel Lima and Madame Lima, entertained at a party yesterday afternoon in the Chinese Room and ball room of the Mayflower, when their guests of honor were the American authorities in the Latin-American International Board.

Among those present were the Brazilian Ambassador and Mme. Martins; the members of the Joint Brazilian-U. S. Defense Commission, including Admiral W. O. Spears, U. S. N., and Mrs. Spears; Admiral Alvaro Rodrigues Vascocellos of the Brazilian navy; Gen. J. G. Ord, United States Army; Gen. Lietao de Carvalho, Brazilian, army; Col. K. F. Hertford, United States Army; Col. Vasco Alves Seco, Brazilian army.

The Inter-American Defense Board and Latin-American Military Attaches and their wives were among the guests. These included Gen. S. D. Embick, Gen. Blanton Winship, United States Army; Gen. Alamillo Flores of the Mexican army, Admiral Artura Espinosa, Chilean Admiral; H. J. Johnson, United States Navy; Col. Lawrence Higgins, United States Army.

Also present were Gen. Boykin C. Wright, Gen. Gideon M. Barnes, Gen. G. G. McMorland, Col. W. J. Baird, Mr. Charles Kempter and Dr. Fernando, Minister-Counselor of the Brazilian Embassy.

Notables Attend Sunset Symphony At Watergate

In honor of their compatriot, Anna Antoniades-Kydis, pianist, the Greek Ambassador and Mme. Cimon Diamantopoulos attended last night's "Sunset Symphonies" concert at the Potomac Watergate. Mme. Kydis appeared as soloist with the National Symphony in Tchaikovsky's B flat minor piano concerto.

Since the program was all Russian, the Russian Ambassador and Mme. Litvinov were also invited to be present.

Others from the Greek Embassy staff who attended included Mr. K. Varvaressos, former minister of finance of the Greek Government and now Ambassador at large to the United States and Great Britain; the Naval Attache, Capt. A. Leontopoulos, and the First Secretary of the Embassy and Mme. A. Antonopoulos.

The National Symphony was conducted on this occasion by Sylvan Levin, musical director and conductor of the Philadelphia Opera Company.

SHORT SHORT STORY

"Glamour-Girl Pictures"

"What a bee-yoo-tiful coat!" said Elsie to the L. Frank Company saleslady. "I love it from the back and from the sides . . .in plain words, I love it!"

"You should" was the smiling answer. "It's one of our marvelous values, this month. I don't need to tell you that Muskrat is warm, and wears well . . . you know it's styled in the new youthful lines—"

'Oh," said Elsie—

"I do want to tell you this . . . it's not just an ordinary Muskrat fur coat, but made entirely from Northern Muskrat pelts, and from the BACKS of the skins only. The Northern Muskrats are sturdier and wear better, of course. Then, it has that lovely deep rich tone, because it's sable-blended."

"Could I pay a deposit on it?" Elsie asked.

"You buy this coat now . . . pay a deposit, it's stored for you until the required one-third payment is made, then there's no extra charge on the long-time payment plan. Simple, isn't it?"

"Every smart girl should know about this!"

WAVE Is Wife—Song Writer; Just Back From Wedding Trip

MRS. CHRISTOPHER D. SULLIVAN, JR.

The former Miss Muriel L. Schnell, U. S. N. R., author of the WAVES Victory Song, is back at her desk in the Navy Department after a wedding trip to Sea Island, Ga.

Her marriage to Christopher D. Sullivan, jr., took place recently in New York, and the bridegroom has returned to that city, where he is secretary to Judge Owen W. Bohan.

The bride, who is a resident of Richmond Hill, New York, is a graduate of Brooklyn College where she was a member of Alpha Sigma Rho. Before entering the WAVES, she was an organist in Brooklyn and been active in Washington music circles, and helped organize the official WAVES Glee Club.

Mr. Sullivan is the son of the late Christopher D. Sullivan, former Representative from New York.

Lieut. Gerard, Miss Grosvenor Wed in N. Y.

At a ceremony yesterday in Buffalo, N. Y., Miss Louise Taft Grosvenor of New York became the bride of Lieut. Sumner P. Gerard, U. S. M. C. R., of New York, who at present is stationed in Washington. The service took place in the chapel of the Trinity Episcopal Church.

The bride, who is the daughter of Mrs. Charles S. Whitman, of New York, and the late Edwin Prescott Grosvenor, is a niece of Dr. Gilbert H. Grosvenor of this city. She is a cousin of the late William Howard Taft, who served as President and Chief Justice of the United States, and her stepfather, Mr. Whitman is a former Governor of New York.

Frequent Visitor In Washington

A frequent visitor to Washington, she was graduated from the Foxcroft School and from Vassar College, where she was elected to Phi Beta Kappa.

Lieut. Gerard is the son of Mrs. Arthur Train and of Sumner Gerard of New York. He returned to this country in February after serving a year and a half overseas, during which period he was an aide to Maj. Gen Russell L. Maxwell, then chief of the United States Supply Services in the Middle East. For a time he was attached to the British Eighth Army and served with the Naval Reserve before being transferred to the Marine Corps Reserve with which he is now on active duty with the parachute troop operations.

Grandson of Charles H. Coster

He is a grandson of the late Charles Henry Coster, who was a partner of the late J. Pierpont Morgan and is a nephew of James Watson Gerard, former United States Ambassador to Germany. Lieut. Gerard was graduated from Groton School and from Trinity College, Cambridge, England, later doing graduate work at the University of Wisconsin. Subsequently he was associated with former Gov. Phillip F. La Follette of Wisconsin.

Sarah Sparks, Executive of Western Union, Visits Here

In Capital on Vacation to See Husband Who Is Captain in Army Signal Corps

The life story of Sarah Sparks of Western Union is a feminine replica of an Horatio Alger fable.

Diminutive, with large brown eyes and upswept graying hair, Mrs. Sparks has come a long way in her 25-year career with Western Union. She is the possessor of a long and lengthy title, that of director of personal service and customer-employe relations in the office of the vice president in New York. Her trek to a top executive position in one of the country's leading industries began 25 years ago in the town of Tucson, Ariz., when she took up the duties of a messenger girl in the local office.

Currently Mrs. Sparks is spending a vacation in Washington, to be with her husband, Capt. Sidney Sparks of the Army Signal Corps. There is much in Washington of interest to the Sparkses, for they met here in the days before the last war when they both were employed in the Western Union office.

"In those days I was an operator," she explained yesterday. "And I had some exciting times. The busiest day I ever experienced was the day President Wilson died. The messages coming in over the wires that day topped everything I ever handled."

Hopes Women Retain Status

Looking to the future, Mrs. Sparks is concerned with the position of women in the postwar world. As vice president of the Business and Professional Women's Clubs of New York State, she believes strongly in the right of women to work and advance in the business world.

Here in Washington she is looking for a hint of what women may expect in the days after the war, when their need in in be given every consideration it is now.

"I trust that women will be able to retain their status," she said. "For it will be in many cases essential. Once this war is over there will be a great many women who will have to be active heads of families. They will have a great need for jobs, and while there is no doubt that men must be given every consideration, it is indeed to be hoped that women too will be given help."

From her broad experience in the field of personnel relations, Mrs. Sparks has drawn the conclusion that much depends upon the ability of women to prove their worth in industry. "Women have proven themselves in many fields," she went on. "Now it remains for them to do a similar job in the new avenues of endeavor that the war has opened up for them."

Cites Cases To Prove Point

Mrs. Sparks speaks with enthusiasm of the work being done by the corps of elderly messengers that have joined the Western Union brigade this year.

"These men and women, most of whom were long since retired from active business, have come forward in a splendid manner and incidentally are having the time of their lives," she added.

She told of an instance in the New York Office where a mother and daughter work in shifts, one working during the mornings while the other remains at home with a youngest member of the household, a 9-month-old baby. In the afternoon they change places, the one carrying war messages around New York while the other tends the baby. Another woman, the mother of 13 children, finds a few hours a day to carry on a necessary messenger job that was vacated when the 18-year-olds were called up for Army duty.

Mrs. De Laney Is Married To Admiral S. E. W. Kittelle

Ceremony Takes Place at Church of Epiphany; Couple to Make Home on California Street

At a quiet ceremony at noon in the Church of the Epiphany yesterday, Mrs. Elizabeth Voltz De Laney, widow of Brig. Gen. Matthew A. De Laney, United States Medical Corps, became the bride of Rear Admiral Sumner E. W. Kittelle, United States Navy. The Rev. Charles W. Sheerin, rector of the church, officiated in the presence of the members of the families and a small group of friends.

The bride was gowned in pale rose beige crepe, fashioned street length. She wore a matching hat trimmed with pale pink chiffon roses and blue velvet ribbon. Her flowers were pale pink roses and forget-me-nots.

Mrs. Frank F. Nesbit was the matron of honor and only attendant. She was gowned in very pale gray crepe and wore a white cartwheel hat and her flowers were pink roses.

Sumner Sigsbee Kittelle, of New York, served as best man for his father.

The bride has no children but Admiral Kittelle has five by his first wife, Anna Lockwood, daughter of the late Rear Admiral Charles D. Sigsbee, U. S. N., and granddaughter of the late Brig. Gen. H. H. Lockwood, West Point, 1836.

The children are Mrs. Charles J. Moore, wife of Capt. Moore, U. S. N.; Mrs. Lester A. Dessez, wife of Col. Dessez, U. S. M. C.; Sumner S. Kittelle, lawyer of New York; Lieut. John Kittelle, (S. C.) U. S. N. R., and Mrs. Fred G. Bennett, wife of Lieut. Comdr. Bennett, U. S. N.

Admiral and Mrs. Kittelle will make their home at 2229 California Street, where Admiral Kittelle is known as a pioneer settler, having built his house there 38 years ago on a dirty country road in the woods.

Capt. Crownover And Bride At Home In Washington

Capt. Arthur Crownover, jr., of the staff and faculty of the Adutjant General's School, Fort Washington, Md., and his bride, the former Miss Augusta Maddux of Nashville, Tenn., are now at home in the Bellevue Gardens Apartments here.

They were married in the Cathedral of the Incarnation at Nashville on Saturday, July 3, and left immediately for their new home.

The bride was attended by her sister, Miss Lucille Connell Maddux, while Joseph T. McCary of Nashville was the best man. The ceremony was performed by Msgr. A. A. Siener.

Mrs. Crownover is the daughter of Mrs. Gus Wilkinson Maddux and was graduated from St. Cecelia Academy and latter attended the George Peabody College for Teachers. She is a member of the Nashville Query Club and the Stagecrafters.

Captain Crownover is connected with the military law department and is post legal assistance officer at Fort Washington. The son of the late Judge Arthur Crownover of Nashville and Mrs. Crownover, he was graduated from Vanderbilt University and its law school. He is a former president of the Nashville Civitan Club, a former State president of the Sons of the American Revolution and vice president general of that organization. Before entering the Army, he was engaged in the practice of law in Nashville as a member of the firm of Hickerson, McCary & Crownover.

War Influence Evident At Sea Shore Resorts

Boom Season Along Jersey Shore Marked by Somber Reminders of War

By Peggy Preston

What has this summer of travel restrictions and food rationing brought to the Atlantic Coast vacation spots? Principally a boom reminiscent of the '20s; but a boom on which the war has exerted a curious influence.

A survey of resorts that dot the Jersey shore indicate that vacation land now is a land of conflicting interests, that even in remote reaches, the man in uniform is the man of the hour; and that pleasure there is continuously interrupted by reverberations of war.

Vacationists by the thousands still throng the beaches along the State's southermost stretch of coastline from Atlantic City to Cape May; children still play in the surf and haunt the boardwalk amusement centers; the sands are still liberally sprinkled with brilliant splotches of color as bathers set up their gala umbrellas and chairs for the season; hotels and inns, those in civilian hands, are filled to capacity. At first glance the "Shore" is the same as before.

But in Atlantic City men of the services practice drills along the avenues; farther along at Cape May guards patrol the beaches, accompanied by a canine member of the armed forces; overhead Navy planes roar by constantly and at almost any hour of the day sun bathers look up to see a giant blimp hovering close to the shore.

Gradually the visitor to any Atlantic beach this summer becomes aware that he may enjoy his annual vacation, but only insofar as he does not interfere with the work and duty of the armed forces.

Dimout Gives Eerie Effect

At night the change is more apparent. The dimout, extending the length of the entire Atlantic coast, is rigidly enforced at the resort spots. Hotel windows have makeshift arrangements, whereby shades may be drawn and held in place against the sea breezes. Along the boardwalks every other lamppost is lighted, but is blacked out on the ocean side. Theaters, restaurants and amusement centers all but go unnoticed with their pale glimmers of light, and evening gatherings on the beaches are prohibited in most places.

There is a certain eerie atmosphere to the wide boardwalks, as crowds continue to promenade up and down before the wooden buildings, which, stripped of their blazing lights, seem colorless and drab.

Despite these minor drawbacks, hotelmen report the biggest season in the history of the "shore."

Civilian patrons for the most part come within two age groups, children and teen-agers in the one, and men and women from 40-odd on in the other. Almost all of them are settled down in a hotel or cottage for the entire summer. Only a few brave souls are attempting to carry on with the traditional week-end commuting business.

One hotelman stated that most of his guests were there to get a respite from the task of wartime housekeeping.

"We have far fewer complaints this season," said Howard Slocum, manager of the Flanders Hotel at Ocean City. "People are so thankful to leave off worrying about the food and servant problem that they are content with much less than they once were."

Traveler Learns Art of Patience

Not all the cottages in the resort towns are occupied. Food shortages are as much in evidence there as in cities and the help problem is even more noticeable. Laundries have little time for civilian business and incoming visitors are fortunate if they have remembered to bring along their own iron.

The seashore visitor will come back home with more than a suntan this year. He will have learned the art of patience. He will learn it or risk the ruin of his nervous system.

He begins his first lesson the moment he leaves home, minus a car and takes his chance on getting a seat in a crowded bus or train. It hits home again when he tugs his luggage along under his own steam on or off trains. And it will stick with a painful certainty when he drags them along hot streets to streetcars or subways in the absence of taxicabs that may not carry passengers to or from pleasure spots.

But he is apt to decide it is worth it all.

Ludwig Ekis Dies; Latvian Diplomat Aide

Ludvig Ekis, 50, financial and economic adviser of the Latvian Legation, died yesterday at his home, 1827 Ingleside Terrace Northwest, after a long illness. Burial and funeral services will be announced later.

MR. EKIS

A few hours after Mr. Ekis' death his son, Sigurd, 20, a student at George WashingtonUniversity, received a notice to report for induction into the Army on July 17.

Mr. Ekis, who was born in Dobele, Latvia, had served in the foreign service of his country since 1920. He was in the Latvian army during that country's fight for independence in 1918-1919 and received the highest Latvian military award.

From 1934 to 1938 he was the Latvian Minister of Finance. Later he was Latvian Minister to Poland, Rumania, Hungary and Turkey. He came to America in 1941 and had been working on the problems of Latvia's economic reconstruction. In 1942 he published a book called "Latvia, Economic Resources and Capacities." Besides his son he is survived by his wife, Mrs. Alma Ekis.

Airline Fares In U. S. Reduced Effective July 15

New York, July 7.—Reduced rates for airline travel within the United States, effective July 15, were made public today at La Guardia Field by the air traffic conference of Washington an association of the major air lines.

Among the rate changes, for trips from New York City, are the following:

To	New	Old
Washington	11.95	$12.20
Boston	9.90	11.95
Charlotte, N. C.	31.25	34.10
Denver	85.25	96.42
Chicago	39.85	44.85
Fort Worth, Tex.	80.60	82.60
New Orleans	67.00	73.85
Miami	60.80	71.15
San Francisco and Los Angeles	138.85	149.95

Under the new schedule, half fares for children under 12 years of age were reinstated after a lapse of seven months.

U. S. Lafayette Raising Expected After July 15

New York, July 7.—Two clews which indicate that the righting of the 82,423-ton U. S. S. Lafayette, formerly the French luxury liner Normandie, is nearing completion were discovered today.

The first is the fact that the Navy is now building a 400-foot observation deck on the southbound roadway of the West Side highway. The second is that the many little shacks and tool houses which adorned the vessel's hull are being torn down.

Orders have been given to the workmen building the observation deck to have it completed by July 15. As the purpose of the deck is to provide a vantage point for newspapermen, Army and Navy officials and visiting Washington dignitaries who wish to watch the actual righting of the huge vessel, unofficial opinions on the date of this delicate process have narrowed down to the period immediately following July 15.

New License Tags For 1944 Ordered

Brand new license plates for 1944—one to a car, for those who still use their cars in spite of gasoline rationing—were authorized by the War Production Board yesterday. Old 1942 plates, used this year with the addition of small 1943 date tags, are to be collected by State governments and either reprocessed or turned in to salvage depots for use as scrap.

By limiting license plates to one a car and to the maximum size of the 1942 plates, the WPB hopes to save 12,500 tons of steel. Prewar annual requirements were about 22,000 tons.

The original plan of using the 1942 plates throughout the war was abandoned because many States reported the license numbers were becoming illegible, and must be replaced in the interest of law enforcement, WPB said.

Mrs. Roosevelt Resting in Nevada

Reno, July 7 (INS).—Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt arrived in Reno by plane today and went to the tumbling D-W ranch near Carson City for "a rest."

The President's wife was not accompanied by her secretary. She said she would hold a news conference tomorrow.

16 Million Women Working in America

President Roosevelt said last night that 16 million American women are now working, more than 2 million directly on munitions production, and all are "doing a grand job."

The occasion for his tribute to the women workers was the twenty-fifth anniversary of establishment of the women's bureau in the Labor Department. He wrote Secretary of Labor Perkins congratulating the bureau.

Soldiers' Release To Farms Viewed Unlikely by WFA

The War Food Administration yesterday sought to "correct an apparently widespread impression" that soldiers will be released in groups to help harvest 1944 crops and do general farm work when a crisis arises.

State extension directors were notified by wire that only in the event of real emergencies will soldiers be released and then as individuals who have applied for agricultural passes and been cleared by their commanding officers.

"No groups have been used for ordinary farm work and it is not expected permission will be given for the release of soldiers in groups to do general agricultural work," it was declared by H. M. Dixon, acting director of the WFA farm labor program.

Food Poisoning Fells 20 Workers

Norfolk, Va., July 7 (AP).—More than a score of workmen on a Navy project at Camp Bradford, near Virginia Beach, were being treated this afternoon at a local hospital for food poisoning.

The men are employes of the Ross Engineering Co. and Kuhr Bros., contractors, and all ate lunch at a canteen near the project.

An official of the Ross company said some of the cases were considered serious.

And Nothing Can Be Done About It

YOUNGSTERS ARE FUNNY. THEY SAY ANYTHING THAT OCCURS TO THEM, WITHOUT STOPPING TO THINK HOW IT WILL SOUND
YES, THAT'S SO
ED TOLD ME HIS DAUGHTER CAME HOME FROM A DANCE LAST NIGHT IN A TOWERING RAGE
WHAT WAS THE TROUBLE?
WHY, IT SEEMS SOME BOY ASKED HER FOR A DANCE. HE'D ALREADY DANCED WITH HER 5 OR 6 TIMES
SHE SAID: "NO! I CAN'T GIVE YOU ANOTHER DANCE, BUT I'LL INTRODUCE YOU TO THE PRETTIEST GIRL IN THE ROOM."
THE BOY SAID: "I DON'T WANT TO DANCE WITH THE PRETTIEST GIRL IN THE ROOM. I WANT TO DANCE WITH YOU!"
HM! I THINK THAT GIRL SHOULD HAVE FELT FLATTERED THAT HE PREFERRED DANCING WITH HER. AND YOU SAY SHE WAS ANGRY?

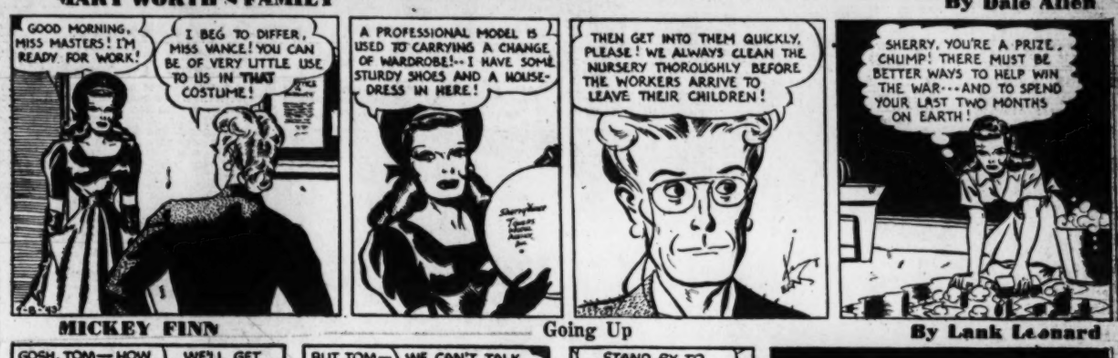
TERRY AND THE PIRATES — Real Bush League — By Milton Caniff

CONNIE, WE'LL DROP OUR GEAR IN THE WATERPROOF BAG AT THE MOUTH OF THIS STREAM AND MARK IT WITH A BUOY! WE MUST APPEAR DESTITUTE WHEN WE LAND!
SO! WEIGHT WILL SINK SAME SIDDEN!
BAD STOOP, CONNIE AND I WILL LIE ON THE BEACH AND ALLOW THE NATIVES TO "DISCOVER" US... YOU HIDE—AND JUMP IN ONLY IF THE FUZZIES ARE UNFRIENDLY...
DAWN
YIPES! CONNIE SLEEPY IN FOOT!
YOU'LL BE HEADLESS IN THE NECK IF THESE GUYS LIKE THE NIPS! HERE THEY COME!
YEE-IPS! GET A LOAD OF THAT!

MARY WORTH'S FAMILY — By Dale Allen



GOOD MORNING, MISS MASTERS! I'M READY FOR WORK!
I BEG TO DIFFER, MISS VANCE! YOU CAN BE OF VERY LITTLE USE TO US IN THAT COSTUME!
A PROFESSIONAL MODEL IS USED TO CARRYING A CHANGE OF WARDROBE!--I HAVE SOME STURDY SHOES AND A HOUSE-DRESS IN HERE!
THEN GET INTO THEM QUICKLY, PLEASE! WE ALWAYS CLEAN THE NURSERY THOROUGHLY BEFORE THE WORKERS ARRIVE TO LEAVE THEIR CHILDREN!
SHERRY, YOU'RE A PRIZE CHUMP! THERE MUST BE BETTER WAYS TO HELP WIN THE WAR···AND TO SPEND YOUR LAST TWO MONTHS ON EARTH!

MICKEY FINN — Going Up — By Lank Leonard

GOSH, TOM—HOW CAN WE FIND THAT U-BOAT BASE—WE CAN'T GET TOO CLOSE TO SHORE—WE'D RUN AGROUND!
WE'LL GET CLOSE ENOUGH TO SEND IN MEN ON A RUBBER BOAT!
BUT TOM—WE CAN'T EXPLORE THE WHOLE COAST! IT WOULD TAKE—
WE CAN'T TALK ANY MORE ABOUT IT NOW, MICKEY! WE GO ON WATCH ON THE BRIDGE IN A FEW MINUTES!
STAND BY TO SURFACE!

MR. AND MRS. — One Little Ray of Sunshine — By Arthur Folwell and Ellison Hoover

OH, ISN'T IT FUNNY!
WHAT? THERE'S NOT MUCH THAT'S FUNNY THESE DAYS
YES, BUT I WAS THINKING—STORES USED TO ADVERTISE, WE GIVE TRADING STAMPS
THAT'S RIGHT. THEY DID. SO WHAT?
WELL, THEY USED TO GIVE ME STAMPS IF I WENT THERE TO BUY—
YEAH, I BEGIN TO SEE. AND NOW—
AND NOW I HAVE TO GIVE THEM STAMPS BEFORE THEY'LL SELL ME ANYTHING
BUT WE DON'T HAVE TO GIVE THEM A PIANO LAMP AS A PREMIUM!

DIXIE DUGAN — Brush Houses — By J. P. McEvoy and H. J. Striebel

WHY DON'T YOU BUILD A TOWN ACCORDING TO YOUR SIZE?
I DON'T GET IT—WHADDEYA MEAN?
IN THE FIRST PLACE IT'D TAKE BIG HUSKY MEN TO CUT DOWN THOSE TREES—AND IN THE SECOND PLACE THEY DON'T BELONG TO US
USE THAT BRUSH TO MAKE YOUR HOUSES—THE BEST YOU CAN—(WHEW) SO FAR, SO GOOD—

RIGHT AROUND HOME — By Dudley Fisher

WHO IS OUT IN THE KITCHEN?
IT'S THE MILKMAN! I'LL TAKE CARE OF IT!
BUT THE MILK TICKETS ARE OUT IN THE KITCHEN!
I KNOW IT!
HE WANTS TO BORROW A COUPLE OF BOBBIE PINS!

JOE PALOOKA — Joe's Old Room — By Ham Fisher

YOUR OLD ROOM.
GULP
THE KID USED TO SIT IN THAT OLD ROCKER AFTER TRAININ' AN' TALK SO MUCH SENSE, YA KNOW "H—" SONOFAGUN HE KNOWED WHAT IT WAS ALL ABOUT.
YEAH. ALL WE TALKED ABOUT WAS HIS COMIN' FIGHT— AN' HE'D JUST SIT THERE LOOKIN' SEEROUS——AN' SUDDENLY HE'D SAY "DON'T YOU FELLA'S KNOW WHAT HITLER'S DOIN'—DON'TCHA CARE ABOUT ANYTHING BUT BOXIN'—AN' WE USED T'LAFF AT 'M!
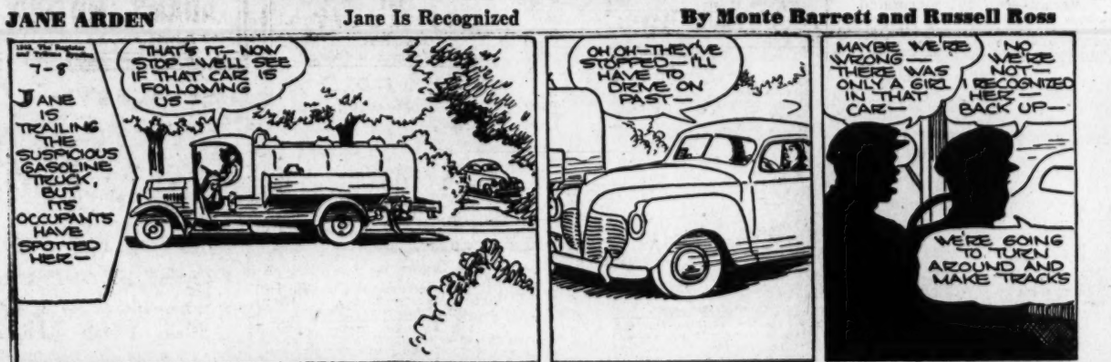
YEAH. WE THOT HE WAS KINDA MUSHY AN' WE WERE THE WISE GUYS!
IS THERE ANYTHING I KIN DO AROUND TH' PLACE T'KEEP BUSY FER A WEEK?
OH SURE. I'LL LET YA HELP WEED OR SOMETHIN'

JANE ARDEN — Jane Is Recognized — By Monte Barrett and Russell Ross

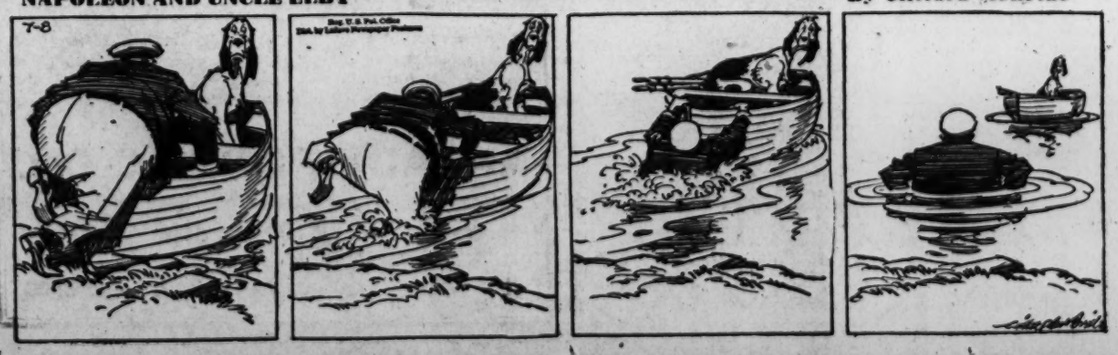


JANE IS TRAILING THE SUSPICIOUS GASOLINE TRUCK, BUT ITS OCCUPANTS HAVE SPOTTED HER—
THAT'S IT—NOW STOP—WE'LL SEE IF THAT CAR IS FOLLOWING US—
OH-OH—THEY'VE STOPPED—I'LL HAVE TO DRIVE ON PAST—
MAYBE WE'RE WRONG—THERE WAS ONLY A GIRL IN THAT CAR—
NO—WE'RE NOT—RECOGNIZED HER—BACK UP—
WE'RE GOING TO TURN AROUND AND MAKE TRACKS

SUPERMAN — Hear Superman 5:45 P.M. Today—WOL — By Jerry Siegel and Joe Shuster

DONNING THE CLOTHES HE HAS APPROPRIATED FROM MASU WATASUKI....
A PERFECT FIT!
I'M WEARING MY SUPERMAN UNIFORM UNDER WATASUKI'S CLOTHES—BUT WHAT AM I TO DO WITH CLARK KENT'S CIVILIAN CLOTHES?
BUT NO PROBLEM IS TOO GREAT FOR THE MAN OF STEEL'S AGILE MIND.
A LENGTH OF ROPE AND TWO LARGE STONES SHOULD DO THE TRICK!
NOT BAD FOR A HASTILY IMPROVISED BOLO!

NAPOLEON AND UNCLE ELBY — By Clifford McBride



DON WINSLOW OF THE NAVY — Calling All Cars — By Frank Martinek

LUCKY WE MADE ARRANGEMENTS FOR A GETAWAY!! BLACKIE, YOU'RE A FOOL!!
AW, BOSS, I THO'T EVERYTHING WAS JAKE. I CAN'T UNDERSTAND WHERE WE SLIPPED UP!
WE'VE GOT TO GO TO WASHINGTON AND HIDE AWAY IN MADAME CARLOVA'S UNTIL THE HEAT'S OVER!!
MEANWHILE
LOOKS LIKE THE JIGS UP, BOSS!!

BIG CHIEF WAHOO — Donald Draws for a Full House! — By Saunders and Woggon

BULLET HOLES IN THE GAS TANK! THAT MAKES EVERYTHING JUST DANDY, FOLKS!
THEY GOT US CORNERED NOW, LIKE RABBITS IN HOLLOW LOG!
LOOKS LIKE A SHORT SIEGE! I'VE GOT ONLY SIX CARTRIDGES LEFT IN THIS BAZOOKA!
THERE'S JUST ONE THING TO DO, STEVE--I'LL GO TALK TO MY FATHER!
NO! WAIT!
DAD! DON'T SHOOT! IT'S GALE!
PERFECT! AS SOON AS SHE'S OUT OF THE LINE OF FIRE, WE CAN FINISH ROPER AND THE INDIAN IN A HURRY!
THAT'S WHAT ALICE THINKS---!

DONALD DUCK — Donald Draws for a Full House! — By Walt Disney

WANTIN' T' SLEEP IN A TENT WHEN Y' GOT A NICE, COMFORTABLE ROOM OF YOUR OWN? I DON'T GET IT!
WE'LL BE RIGHT IN THE BACK YARD!
OKAY!
KIDS SURE AREN'T PRACTICAL! GIVIN' UP A NICE---!?
